THE LIME-KILN MAN.

In yesterday's Times we chronicled the decease on Sunday morning, at Bellevue Hospital, of "the Lime-kiln Man." More conspicuously known, perhaps, during the past twenty-five years than any public man in this City. His daily wanderings through the streets of our metropolis for nearly a quarter of a century,—his dress comprising the same uniform combination of tattered woolen, dirt and lime,—his hat indescribably worse than "shocking bad,"—his boots heavier than the heaviest "stogies,"—his exceedive growth of hair,—his bent form,—his peculiar gait—and withal, his utter unobtrusiveness of manner, have served perfectly to familiarize his form to our citizens. Everybody knew "the Lime-kiln Man." Everybody knew, too, that he lived isolated from society, that he slept in lime-kilns, and that of his past history he was strangely silent. A few testified that occasionally he would throw off his moody reserve, then it was said his eye, naturally so calm, was full of fire—his form dilated to a dignity almost majestic, and every word he uttered not only evidenced highest mental culture, but stirred his auditors with its impassioned tones of feeling and eloquence. But it was only momentary; quickly returned his wonted air and reserve, and not a word further could he be induced to speak. Meanwhile, to increase public interest in this strangely isolated and anomalous character, from time to time, stories have been circulated of the causes inducing to the adoption of his mode of existence. Love has been spoken of as the reason; but though such recitals have doubtless awakened double sympathy in gentle hearts, for its maddened victim, it is a fact that nothing tangible and reliable connected with his earlier history has ever been made known. In this respect, among the numerous eccentric personages who, from time to time, have also here "played their part," it is impossible to find a parallel of ROSWALD SALTONSTALL, for instance, or, as he was generally designated, the "Duke de Rigmarole." Particulars connected with his early biography, though personally he was perversely incommunicative on this point, became known long before his death. Fresh in the minds of many doubtless continues the recollection of this strange existence as through our streets he wandered, bearing aloft—

"With measuring hand,
Put forth as in the action of command,"

a scroll with key attached, sent him, as he alleged, by Queen VICTORIA, and giving him jurisdiction wherever he went.

The celebrated Bank Note List Man was another striking character, and well remembered is the marked figure he cut, wearing alternately an immense bell-crowned and steeple-crowned hat. But his antecedents the public were privileged to enjoy while he lived. So it was with MACDONALD CLARK, the mad poet. So indeed, without exception, has it been with every wit of metropolitan memory, any where near "to madness allied," prior and contemporaneous to the "Lime-kiln Man."

The latter, however, to the day of his demise—as far as the public is concerned—has been able to preserve his incognito. To one person alone did he voluntarily communicate his right name. One other there was—and only one—who knew his name before, and that was a fellow-townsman, who recognized him despite his tattered covering of rags and filth. And, as if by a strange dispensation of Providence, this very same person, by the merest accident, was called to sit with the Jury of investigation into the cause of his decease.

And indeed, but for this very circumstance itself, the real facts as touching the earlier history of the "Lime-kiln Man" would, doubtless, have never been publicly known. The person to whom he told his name—and to whom we shall allude more fully presently—he communicated nothing whatever of his past career. Upon his fellow-townsman when he acknowledged his identity, he enjoined, till assured his wishes should be complied with, the strictest secrecy as to the circumstances and character of his youth. From this party, however, since justly assuming that the death of the "Lime-kiln Man" removes the injunction of secrecy, we are enabled to present the following brief outline of the birth, parentage and early history of this strange character:

WM. MCFARLAND—such is his right name—was born in the township of Brigallen, Scotland, June 12, 1803. His father, JOHN MCFARLAND, was a farmer in comfortable circumstances, and distinguished for his industry, integrity and sound judgment. He was a zealous High Churchman. On the maternal side was an unusually strong mental organization, though combined with the delicate sensibilities that form woman's chief adornment. There were two brothers older than WILLIAM and a sister younger. WILLIAM, in common with the others, enjoyed the advantages of common school education as then afforded—that is, in Winters went to school and Summers worked at the plow.

In his fifteenth year or thereabout he was sent to a high school, or academy, as would be termed here, in a neighboring township, where he remained some two years. Of his scholastic achievements here, we are unable to speak. Our informant, though, states that from quite a child he was remarkable for his controversial ability, and that he was often known to demolish the argument of even the oldest heads. His thoughts and method were always very clear, and clearly enunciated. Mathematics was his favorite.

After leaving the Academy he assisted on his father's farm a year or two. During this time he employed his leisure hours in reading and study, and rarely mingled with those of his own age in their customary sports and festivities. When he was about twenty he assumed the charge of a school in a town a few miles distant. It was here, our informant stated, occurred what proved to be the turning point in his life. To make the recital short, it appears he became attached to a beautiful blue-eyed maid, that they were betrothed, and that she married his brother.

Meanwhile, numerous were their tender meetings under the trysting tree and vows of constancy. Many were the sweet tokens of remembrance and letters, burning with love, that passed between them. As length his next older brother—named KNOX—came to visit him and was introduced to his affianced. What followed has already been intimated. This brother induced the object of his brother's affection to elope with him. Crushed in spirit, broken in heart, WILLIAM, the subject of this sketch, turns to go—not home—but to flee the recollection of his misery. The next few years, whither he wandered and how, our informant could never gather from Mr. MCFARLAND, though, as he says, he conversed it time and time again. It were hardly difficult to fancy his poignant grief—as his subsequent career shows he never outlived this sudden blow to the fervent hopes and dreams of his youth.

In 1830 he appears in New-York. His tattered garments and long hair make him an object of notice, till finally from being known to lodge in a lime-kiln he comes to be designated the "Lime-kiln Man." His general career from this time to the present is well known. It is known that he ignored labor—and that though he never begged, he never refused charity when tendered him. As for his sleeping it was supposed he slept in the Park, lumber yards, &c. in Summer, and in the lime-kilns in the Winter. This is not entirely correct. During the past seventeen years he has been a constant occupant of the lime-kiln of Mr. H. B. KNAPP in his present place in Fourteenth-street, between Avenues A and B, and former place corner Avenue B and Second-street.

It is rarely he has remained away a night, either Summer or Winter. He was there punctually at dark, and invariably went away by daylight. These lime-kilns comprise generally three furnaces, twelve to fifteen feet deep, which are filled with the oyster and clam shells, from which the lime is made, and a fire kept beneath them. In the Winter this fire is kept up without intermission. The top of these stacks is level with the street underneath is divided into various apartments.

Formerly the "Lime-kiln Man" made his lodging place on top of the mouth of one of the stacks, till getting one of his hands badly burned, he solicited more secure accommodations below, which were readily accorded to him, and here he has invariably slept. His mode was to lie on the slacking lime. Sometimes when very cold, he would envelop himself with the exception of his head, in the slacking material. We took occasion to visit the place he has made his home the last few years, and found it neat, and by no means as repulsive as we imagined. The white appearance of everything gave it a cleanly, if not inviting look, and the slacking lime is not as bad a resting-place as one might conceive. The "Lime-kiln Man" took his supper here, comprising such food as he had picked up or as had been given him during the day. He always had a goodly supply of newspapers. He read no books but his Bible, which was his invariable companion. His quotations of Scripture were remarkable. Day times he occupied in seeming listless wandering through different portions of the City. He visited every day Fulton Market, and indeed rallied upon his visits here for his main supplies of food. He never used to ask for food, but there were those who furnished him some regularly. And so with money; he never solicited any, though he never refused to accept a proffered donation.

As for his clothes, he was known sometimes to change a garment, but he would never give up an article of wearing apparel as long as it could be of the slightest use. A washerwoman he was unquestionably ignorant of. And so he lived and died. Last Thursday night he slept at his customary place, and was on his return from his customary visit to Fulton Market when seized with the sickness that resulted in his death. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital and died.

He uttered no word or showed looks of recognition, but silently his spirit passed to the spirit land. Upon him was found a Bible, a London edition, bearing date 1824, printed by the "Naval and Military Bible Society." The clasps were worn off, and both blackened the usage of an evident believer in its precepts. An old pocket-book he also had with him, containing two twenty-five cent pieces. In his hat were a large number of bits of blank paper.

The form of the "Lime-kiln Man" was large, his countenance expressive; his mouth denoted firmness, his nose was straight, his complexion sallow and marked with lines of care; his forehead showed a strong intellectual organization and good reasoning faculties. His hair was dark and thin on the top.

Now sleeps in Potter's Field the "Lime-kiln Man." The events and conclusion of his life may be a mystery. From occasional indications it is evident he possessed winning qualities that might have secured him eminence and honor. As it is, in the seeming inutility of his existence, it may be found that when the clouds and shades of the present hour have passed away under the clear light of infallible certainty, the still and noiseless destiny of the "Lime-kiln Man" has worked out its part in the great problem of humanity as effectually as that of the proudest and most famous.

Total				23,848	23,066

Increase in the last five years, 163.

The complete Census returns of Oswego County show an increase of 7,508 since 1850, making the total population 69,910.

MOUNT MORRIS.—The Census shows the population of Mount Morris to be 4,668. This is a decrease of 464 since 1850.

GREENE COUNTY.—Since 1850, the population of Greene has increased 2,458. It is now 30,940.

GLOVERSVILLE, FULTON COUNTY.—The Census shows the population of Gloversville to be 1,966, against 1,026 in 1850. There were manufactured in this village in 1854, one hundred thousand dozen gloves and mittens.

JOHNSTOWN.—The Census gives the population of this village as 1,865, against 1,334 in 1850.

KANSAS.

Proceedings of the Legislature—Governor Reeder's Veto Message.

Reported for the Missouri Democrat.

SHAWNEE MISSION, K. T., July 21, 1855.

GOVERNOR REEDER'S VETOES.

The Legislature convened at 2 P. M. The following message to the House from the Governor was read:

To the House of Representatives of the Territory of Kansas:

I return to your House in which they originated the bill entitled an act to prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors and games of chance within one mile of the Shawnee Manual Labor School, in the Territory of Kansas; and the bill entitled an act to establish a ferry at the town of Atchison, in Kansas Territory, without my approval. I see nothing in the bills themselves to prevent my sanction of them, and my reasons for disapproval have been doubtless anticipated by you as necessarily resulting from the opinions expressed in my message of the 6th instant.

The question is of the powers of the Legislature, and whether the Legislature is now in session at a place recognized as a seat of government where the business of legislation can be legally or legitimately carried on. The creation of a seat of government, in any case, by competent authority, carries with it a necessary and unavoidable implication, from the meaning and force of the term, that the laws which are to be passed for the government of the State or Territory shall be there enacted, and therefore makes it the clear duty of the Legislature to perform their functions at that place. It can have no other object or purpose, and we cannot for a moment suppose that the authority which creates a seat of government contemplated that all the acts and powers of government might be performed and exercised as well at any other place. It clearly means that the enactment of laws, which is the highest and most important function of governmental power, should be exercised at that place and no other.

This proposition is so plain that it will probably not be controverted, and its correctness seems to be admitted by the Legislative Assembly in the fact of the passage by them of an act constituting this the seat of government before they would remove here from the place at which they were convened. Were that act valid and within the powers of the Territorial Legislature, the question could not arise. To its validity, however, I cannot give my assent, and I propose now to state my reasons for that opinion.

The whole Territorial Government is brought into existence by the Act of Congress passed May 31, 1854, and to it we must look for the limit and extent of the Legislative, Judicial and Executive powers. The 22d section provides that the legislative power and authority "of said Territory shall be vested in the Governor and a Legislative Assembly," and then proceeds to declare how the Assembly shall be constituted, and the first Assembly elected; and at the close we find the following language: "The persons thus elected shall meet at such place and on such day as the Governor shall appoint; but hereafter, the time, place and manner of holding and conducting all elections by the people, and apportioning the representation in the several counties or districts to the Council and House of Representatives according to the number of qualified voters shall be prescribed by law, as well as the day of the commencement of the regular sessions of the Legislative Assembly."

It will thus be seen, that although Congress gives to the Legislature the power to determine the time when the Assembly shall thereafter meet, they do not confer power to fix the place. We will see on further examination, the reason for this, and that Congress choose to retain and exercise this power themselves.

By the 26th section it provides, "That the legislative power of said Territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation consistent with the Constitution of the United States and the provisions of this act."

By the 31st section it is provided, "That the seat of Government of said Territory is hereby located temporarily at Fort Leavenworth;" and further provision is made for the occupation of buildings not needed for military purposes.

By the Appropriation bill passed August 5, 1854, section 6, Congress enacted—That in the event that the Secretary of War shall deem it inconsistent with the interests of the military service to furnish a sufficient portion of the military buildings at Fort Leavenworth for the use of the Territorial Government of Kansas, the sum of $25,000 shall be, and in that contingency is, hereby appropriated for the erection of public buildings for the use of the Legislature of the Territory of Kansas, to be expended under the direction of the Governor of said Territory.

It is worthy of note here, although not precisely a legal argument on the construction of these acts, that within a few days before the passage of the last recited act, Congress refused to make the appropriation, coupled with a clause which fixed the temporary seat of Government at Fort Leavenworth. It is enough, however, to know that they did not repeal it. The appropriation was made, leaving that section in full force.

On the 3d day of March, 1855, Congress made a further appropriation of $25,000 for public buildings, with the proviso that said money, or any part thereof, or any portion of the money heretofore appropriated for this purpose, shall not be expended until the Legislature of said Territory shall have fixed by law the permanent seat of Government.

This last enactment conclusively establishes two points. First, that the Legislature have the power to fix the permanent seat of Government as contradistinguished from a temporary one; and, second, that no part of the appropriation is to be expended at a temporary seat of Government which Congress persisted on keeping at Fort Leavenworth.

Thus stood the legislation of Congress, when the Legislative Assembly was convened. The Executive was vested with power to designate the place where they should first meet. Congress had themselves fixed a temporary seat of Government at which the Legislature could meet, in case they should leave the first place of meeting, or in case a second Legislature should convene before the permanent seat of Government was fixed. And the Legislature were authorized to fix a permanent seat of Government where the appropriations were to be expended.

This latter power they may at any time exercise, but the two former they clearly cannot, unless they have power to repeal and overrule an act of Congress.

The only authority under which the Legislative Assembly are sitting at the Shawnee Manual Labor School, is an act of their own, passed on the 6th inst., at the place where they were convened by the Executive, enacted, "An act to remove the seat of Government temporarily at the Shawnee Manual Labor School in the Territory of Kansas."

At the place where they were first convened, the Legislature could undoubtedly have fixed the permanent seat of Government where the appropriations could have been expended, and adjourned at once to such place; or if they choose to delay acting upon that measure, they could in the meantime have adjourned to the temporary seat of Government which Congress had established, but it is impossible for one to perceive how they can establish a temporary seat of Government at a different place from that which Congress has said it should be, without such a conflict as to render the Legislature actually void.

We find in the organic act many instances of legislation which was intended only to be provisional; and intended to last only until the subject to which they relate should pass with the hands of the Legislature—such as the qualifications of electors—times and places of Courts—defining of districts—appointment of officers, &c., but in each of these cases the power to change the provisions of the organic act is expressly given, while in regard to the temporary seat of Government it is not given.

Indeed, in view of the fact that Congress has not included this on the provisional legislation—that is speaking of the day and place for all meetings of the Legislature after the first, they give power to the Legislature to fix the day but not the place—that the only power given to the Legislature in reference to the seat of government, is the power to fix the permanent place where the appropriation shall be expended, and the restriction of legislation to matters consistent with the organic act, all concur to prove that the act of the Territorial Legislature, creating a temporary seat of government, is unauthorized and void.

Did the Legislature possess general powers, and not trammeled as they are by the restriction of consistency with the organic act, their power to change the seat of government at pleasure could not be doubted. As it is, if they can contravene the 31st section, I see no reason why they may not equally as well pass laws in conflict with any other provision which the bill contains.

It seems to be plain that the Legislature are now in session, so far as the place is concerned, in contravention of the act of Congress, and where they have no right to sit, and can make no valid legislation. Entertaining these views, I can give no sanction to any bill that may be passed; and if my reasons are not satisfactory to the Legislative Assembly, it follows that we must act independently of each other.

The necessary embarrassment consequent upon this difference of opinion between the Legislative Assembly and the Executive, will be of no grave a character, and so desirable to avoid, if possible, that I have most earnestly scrutinized the grounds of my opinion, and sought for all the arguments against it with diligent care and a willingness to be convinced, but I am constrained to say that reflection and examination only serve to rivet upon my mind more and more strongly the conviction of its correctness.

If I am right in these opinions, and our Territory shall derive no fruits from the meeting of the present Legislative Assembly, I shall at least have the satisfaction of recollecting that I called the attention of the Assembly to the point before they removed, and that the responsibility, therefore, rests not on the Executive. A. H. REEDER.

SHAWNEE, Meth. Mission, July 21, 1855.

A similar message—in fact the same veto, verbatim et literatim—was sent to the Council, returning a bill that originated in that body.

Immediately after the veto was read, the Legislature adjourned till Monday at noon.

THE "VEILED MURDERESS."

Her Life and History—"Who is Mrs. Robinson?"—Her Departure for Sing Sing—Incidents on the Way—Threats of Self-Destruction—Imprisonment for Life.

From the Troy Times, July 30.

During the past two months, or since the libel suit was commenced against us by WM. F. WOOD, of Quebec, on account of an editorial article in the Times, in which we made certain well-known statements as regards the identity of the "veiled murderess," we have had frequent interviews with Mrs. ROBINSON, and have conversed with her freely about her history and "mystery." Immediately on being informed of the prosecution, she lifted the veil and disclosed all of mystery that had surrounded her identity—declaring that she was unwilling, either directly or indirectly, to be the cause of inflicting injury upon the innocent. She not only made the disclosure to us frankly, and in all apparent sincerity and truthfulness, but to many others, also, who had known CHARLOTTE WOOD in the happy days of girlhood, as a pure, beautiful and accomplished young lady, and as a pupil in the Troy Female Seminary. Mrs. R. invited many who knew her some twelve years ago, while attending the Seminary, to visit her at the jail, with the view, as she averred, of her identity. Several of them did visit her, and not one of them, we believe, hesitates to express the undoubting belief as to who she is. Others, from timidity and a fear of publicity in the matter, or a dread of giving offence if they consented to become voluntary witnesses for the vindication of the truth, refused to see her at all. But to all who did see her, in compliance with her request, she was as outspoken, as frank, and as sincere in her admissions and confessions as she was to us.

That Mrs. ROBINSON bears an assumed name, there is no doubt; that she has been grievously sinned against as well as sinning, we sincerely believe is true. We have no desire to open fresh the heart-wounds of an afflicted family, nor to add another pang, even in self-vindication and in exposure of unjustifiable conduct, to the keen sufferings they must already have experienced, and are now enduring. But for a prompting cause in this City, having its origin in erroneous conceptions of respectability and duty, and a most indiscreet exposure of itself to the severity of public criticism, we do not believe that even family pride, high as it is held, and tenaciously as it is cherished by the wealthy and the high-born English, would have induced such conduct. On this head, therefore, we for the present forbear that commentary which self-respect and personal dignity, if not a sense of duty, almost compel us to make.

As represented by Mrs. SMITH, Mrs. ROBINSON states that she was married while quite young to a man she did not love. She was married at her home in Quebec. She accompanied her husband, who held an honorable position in life, to England. She lived with him some time, but could not love him. She makes no complaint that he did not treat her well. Finally, she left him and returned to this country. She visited her home in Quebec—her family were dissatisfied with her course in deserting her husband—they repulsed her—she here commenced her sinning. Returning to Troy, in a desperate state of mind—caring little what became of her—here she openly violated her marital vow, and became a mistress. The rest of the story we need not relate. Nor is it necessary to mention the painful incidents that have darkened and disgraced her subsequent life. She plighted her virtue, and led a life of shame.

She yielded to passion, and lived with a man who was not her husband. We have no evidence that in this particular she sinned more than this. But, amid all her shame, weighed down with guilt, and the victim of licentiousness, she retained in the last much of the pride and not a little of the dignity of her former character. She is a woman of

The personal appearance, though the life she has led during the past few years, and the sufferings she has undergone, have begun to make inroads upon her, is still striking. Her bearing, though, is not that of a lady, however, she may have been, when she could, with propriety, assume the character of one. Her eye is that characteristic of her virtuous girlhood.

The course of life she commenced in on evil bent to persons, without their cooperation, to conceal her shames from the knowledge of her friends, and when she still lived, she continued to live, preying upon her mind that she would be detected by him and compelled to lead the life of a common outcast, went with her to the grave unknown—all this shows a close to her outward conduct, behavior and to her awful crime. She, moreover, also would seem to commence, and finish, the taking of the life of two innocent human beings who had never injured her.

The prisoner of her arrest for the crime of double-murder, two years ago last May, has been convicted more than one year ago, her present sentence to be executed on Friday next, and the commutation of that sentence by the Governor to imprisonment for life at the State Prison in Sing Sing, is fresh in the recollection of our readers. Her strange conduct at times in the jail has been heralded by the public press.

At times, when we have visited this unfortunate woman at the jail, she has conversed thoughtfully and rationally for a time, manifesting all the dignity of an accomplished lady. Then she would suddenly turn the conversation upon some subject, her cheeks would burn, her eyes would snap, and incoherency of thought and severity of denunciation indulged in would be indeed startling and shocking. At these times she seemed to have no control over herself; and yet, after the paroxysms of passion, she would weep like a child, and try, in her poor way, to make amends. We saw and conversed with Mrs. ROBINSON the last time on Wednesday evening. She was cheerfully to the lady accompanying us, inquiring gaily—"What are they going to do with me?" When assured that she would not probably be executed, she exclaimed—"I will not go to State Prison; I want to die; why will they persecute me so?" She decided that the only alternative to the commutation of her sentence was her execution. Sheriff PRINCE and his family, throughout, have done all still more to her misery by unremitting attention.

Sheriff PRINCE and his family have treated the poor woman with the utmost kindness, and have done all in their power to make her imprisonment as comfortable as possible. They have even allowed her the privilege that might with propriety have been denied a prisoner convicted of the crime of murder. They are fully convinced, as are her counsel and all who have seen her frequently, of her insanity, that she was not responsible for her actions, and that she was and is now a monomaniac. And the fact that she has twice attempted to take her own life, and once that of her child, three to whom she is indicted for murder, lends strong weight while in jail, goes to establish the conviction that she is insane.

In the state of mind we have always found Mrs. ROBINSON, she was certainly incoherent in her conversation, rambling, disconnected, and, if we may use the term, freely, attributed to her. Her plans were not consistently designed, her views were confused and inconsistent, and her conversation and actions frequently contradictory.

Having had previous notice that she would be taken away in the course of the day on Thursday last, Mrs. ROBINSON had made careful preparation to celebrate her departure with a hearty and free libation. For that purpose, she had secured the contents of her bed and other combustibles together to have whiskey and bed ready to ignite the pile at the proper time. Of course, all these plans were frustrated and the materials removed. Sheriff PRINCE had made arrangements to take her to Sing Sing by the Hudson River train leaving at 4 o'clock, and she was taken in a carriage to the Depot by Deputy Sheriff HAGERMAN. The carriage was driven quiet, in order to avoid a crowd and public excitement. Quite a number of persons, however, assembled, who manifested great sympathy by the sight of her, which the most frantic exertions of the officers could not prevent. When leaving the carriage, she was highly excited and, according to the Sheriff and his family, exceedingly desirous to be in very bad humor. On the cars she talked continually, and frequently changing into her many trunks for different articles. On reaching the cars, Sheriff PRINCE took charge of her to Sing Sing. When the cars started she soon asked if there were not going to take her home to friends, saying to the Sheriff, "You are going to take me home, don't you?" She then described the scenery on Lake Champlain, the Islands in the River and Canada. She soon, however, changed to scolding and laughing alternately, and would then look out of the cars, and burst into rhapsodies upon the beauty and grandeur of the Rivery scenery. Again asking if they were not going home. These changes took place many times on her passage down. In reply to some of these questions, the Sheriff frankly told her where she was going to—that he was taking her to Sing Sing. She was greatly moved and declared that she would not remain in Prison long—that she should kill herself—that he would soon hear of her death.

At times she seemed perfectly bewildered, and frequently when she asked if she were not going home, she seemed really in earnest in the belief that she was on her way there. Again she would speak in a rational manner. She was very much troubled about her clothes. She was afraid they would make her put on prison clothes. She wanted to wear her own clothes, and when they were gone she would get more. She entreated the Sheriff to intercede with the prison officers for her. She alluded frequently to the pleasant scenery along the route, and expressed a wish that it was a fair day and she had pencil and paper to make sketches. Her actions and talk on this subject were very simple and child-like.

When at Poughkeepsie she expressed a wish for some refreshments, she partook of them in a very decorous and lady-like manner. Although very few of the passengers were aware who she was, she was under the impression that everybody knew her, and seemed very much annoyed and excited about it. She kept herself closely veiled all the time, until after dark.

Before reaching Sing Sing, she appeared very much exhausted and weary. On arriving there she was quite bewildered, asking frequently where she was. When she entered the office of the prison, the Sheriff announced her name, the officers in charge not happening to be present, and a party of young ladies and gentlemen being present in the room, did not greet her very cordially. She turned to the Sheriff and exclaimed: "What queer people these are; they have no manners!" She then begged to be taken home; she did not wish to stay in such a place, and among such folks. She repeated her request to be taken home, and urged the Sheriff to have her brother WINSLOW come for her. She continued this message upon him several times.

Soon the officer came in and proceeded to put her the usual questions as to her age, birthplace, &c. At this procedure she laughed immoderately. Turning to Sheriff PRINCE she said—"Why, the man is crazy!" The officer assisted her to compose herself and to answer him correctly. She continued to laugh heartily. When he asked her age she declared she would not tell him. In answer to the question as to her birth-place, she said she was born in Quebec. This was the only answer she would make to any of the questions put to her. He threatened her with cold water, but she only answered with a laugh. He finally relinquished his efforts and postponed the matter, saying to her if she did not answer next time, she would get cold water. She [illegible]

A calamity has occurred in the "[illegible]" of the Palace, under Alexander [illegible]. It is against the express rule of the machinery room, for any person but those appointed to that duty, to connect the wheel of any piece of mechanism with the revolving shaft overhead, by means of the hand communicating motion. It quite, or in forgetfulness of this regulation, the agents for Blanchard's Automatic Sculptor ordered a workman named Grangier to connect the band. Grangier, in obeying, was caught by his blouse and almost instantaneously killed. The Moniteur rather feebly warns exhibitors that they cannot be permitted to transgress the rules.

The English Dramatic Company has dispersed, the capitalists having lost in eight performances, the sum of $6,000. The great Exposition will be responsible for innumerable other disappointments and bankruptcies of the same sort! Mr. Wallack, upon the discomfiture of his original plan, endeavored, with two or three other members of the company, to obtain an engagement at one of the lesser theatres, proposing to perform an act or two in English, every night. The arrangement, though open on the point of succeeding, has not been ratified.

A theatrical and newspaper quarrel is exciting attention. Figaro, in sketching the public and private career of the artists of the Gymnase, said of Mr. Garraud, that at the time of his début, many years since, he often performed in a play, in which he had to deliver sundry notes to the heroine of the piece. With this young lady he was violently in love, and the messages he was made to convey to her in view of the audience, were billets doux and other protestations of attachment from other individuals. To this M. Garraud replied with a positive denial, rebutting also at some length other assertions contained in the same article. This reply Figaro refused to insert in its next Saturday's number. M. Garraud, however, sent the reply a second time, by a Sheriff, a formality which compels the publication, in any paper, of a reply to an attack. This was a fortnight ago. Last Saturday, Figaro appeared with a translation of Garraud's letter into English, and announces that each number will contain the same epistolary gem, done into one of the European languages. An Italian version is promised for next week, to be followed by a German rendering. This small malice does Figaro little honor, and it will doubtless drop the matter before it arrives at the fourth polyglot transfer.

But the grand dramatic interest of the week continues to centre in the admirable Italienne, Ristori. She plays Marie Stuart four times a week to audiences of $1,200 apiece. Three portraits of her have appeared, one as the Queen of Scots, and two as Myrrha. Several sculptors are engaged upon her statuette. The Italians here are wearisomely quizzed for their lack of appreciation, and when a Tuscan or a Roman alludes patriotically to la scena gran tragica, the Parisian retorts with a "Veuiez vous en bâtiser tranquille avec votre gran tragica; est-ce que vous l'avez comprise, vous autres?" The Revue Franco-Italienne, published here, has thought proper, in a long letter to Ristori, gently to reproach her for her astonishment at her success, and asks whether Italy has not given her more money than to any other of her artistes, &c. This may be true, but it is far from shewing that Italy, in acknowledging her to be her best actress, considered her as equal or superior to Rachel. She came here utterly unknown—proof positive that she was unknown at home! What crowds she will attract when she returns to Turin!

She has recited this week at a concert, a dramatic scene, by the Sicilian poet, Bisazza. It presents a young peasant girl, betrothed, and soon to be married; but her lover is drafted into the army, and departs for the wars. She gradually loses her reason, wanders upon the sea-shore, chants sad melodies, and watches for vessels homeward bound. At last the young soldier returns, meets his fiancée, and seeks to recall her to life and to happiness. She plays with his plume, admires his gay dress and his cross gained upon the field, but does not remember him. At last, in one flash of memory and recognition, she calls him by name, and expires in his arms. Ristori's interpretation of this little monologue is entirely beyond description. I can only say that the audience wept away all its tears, and then cheered away all its voice.

Rachel has commenced her six representations d'adieu, and is meeting with her usual success: the audiences are two-thirds foreigners. The Journals are merciless. One says, "Rachel might, if she would, be really of use to the French dramatic art! She is certainly one of the first of modern actresses! She is one of the hopes of the stage, and may, perhaps, become its glory! But she is beginning to declaim somewhat, and she has certainly learned bad habits in the Provinces, and in her continual forays to foreign lands!" A monthly review says, that the perfect actress must be "mistress of the lyre of seven strings;" that Ristori controls the whole seven, while Rachel has never really mastered but two! Another says Rachel visibly imitates Ristori! Sainte Victor, the feuilletonist of the Presse, the most brilliant critic in France, and perhaps the most enthusiastic admirer of Ristori, after a magnificent article upon Marie Stuart, postponed his notice of Rachel's Phèdre for a week, as he does not wish to be led into running a parallel, than which he thinks nothing can be more false. "You may play toss-up with coppers, not with medallions. Art is grand: there is more than one sanctuary in its temple; and the censer with which we honor the new divinity, is an unfit weapon to demolish the ancient idol." Jules Janin also thinks there is room for two, but his late plea for the Jewess is said to have given her more pain than pleasure.

Rachel's engagement in America is with her brother, Raphael, who is at once the capitalist and the manager. She is to give 200 representations and receive therefor 1,280,000 francs, or $250,000 about. Her three sisters are attached to her troupe, though I do not see in what capacity, as they have never yet played in any of her dramas. The other artists whom she takes with her are unknown to fame, except M. Ramboux, who enjoys a certain repute. It seems her contract allows her to give supplementary performances for the poor. Encourage her in this new and untried path. In France she is not given to volunteer, or to perform, gratuitously, upon beneficent occasions.

The Provençal company abandoned their experiment of delighting the Parisians by exhibitions of Mediterranean literature and of Marseilles pronunciation, after two performances. The dialect proved quite unintelligible, and it hardly seemed worth while to make such efforts of attention as would be gladly bestowed upon Shakespeare or Alfieri, in behalf of an unrecognized idiom. So the enterprise came to an untimely end.

Alex. Dumas has applied for the authorization to engage the Jardin d'Hiver for the Summer, in order to give, upon a stage to be erected in it, representations of a new Greek drama of his composition. He will in all probability obtain it.

Col. Rabani, manager for the past two years of the Italian Opera, has notified the Minister of State that, as his administration has resulted in a heavy loss of money, he finds himself constrained to abandon it. He complains that while the other imperial theatres have no expenses of rent, and have a subvention besides, the Italian subvention is swallowed up in meeting the rent of the house, which is not the property of the State, but belongs to individuals. If the Treasury will pay the rent, he will continue the theatre. The reason for the poor support afforded by the Government to the Italians, is the fact that the manager, the composers and the artists are exclusively foreigners. The Government will undoubtedly bestow the necessary aid, rather than see the establishment either or decease. Dick Tinto.

SUMMER CLEANINGS.

NUMBER FOUR.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

Congress Hall, Sunday Morning, July 29, 1855.

Never dawned there a more glorious morning than this, and it is all the more appreciated for the glorious rain we had yesterday. This Summer is an different from the last, when there was scarcely a drop to wet the parched earth for weeks and weeks. This season there have been just enough showers to keep everything fresh and bright and beautiful, without drenching us or filling the streets with mud.

It is Sunday morning, as my date indicates, and perhaps you will think I should be better employed than in writing a letter for the Daily Times. I heard of a young lady who was in the ball-room till twelve last evening, who thinks it is very wicked to go to the Springs on Sunday morning! I wish to give my impressions of a Saratoga Sunday, and cannot do it so well as on the very day I receive them. I have heard people remark that one day was like every other in a place like this, but it is very far from true. Sunday is observed here, and there is a very marked difference between it and the other six days of the week. There is no music at the Springs, though I think a few extracts from those grand oratorios we sometimes hear on Sunday evening in the City, would not be amiss. As it is, the people move about more quietly, and there seems a solemn stillness in the groves. Every leaf and blade of grass is strung with dew drops—

"That diamond dew so pure and clear,
Which rivals all but beauty's tear,"

and the birds warble their sweetest notes, or else they seem sweeter because there is naught to disturb their harmony. The water drinkers drink more temperately, and the meetings and the greetings have a softer cadence.

There are five hundred people in this house, and we look around and exclaim, "Is it possible!" No Parisian household could be more orderly. The tramping of footsteps, which is usually heard from morn till midnight in the long piazzas, is not heard to-day; and, instead, we see processions of "lads and ladies gay" wending their way to the village churches. The shops are shut, the bowling-alleys and billiard-rooms are closed, and over all there reigns a Sabbath stillness which is beautiful to see.

I suppose some gentleman would tell me of an abundance of places where vice is lurking and revelry and rioting are far from hushed; but I do not pretend to chronicle what I do not see, and do not feel called upon to look in upon any such sights.

Saratoga is not the only place where there are, behind the curtain, scenes; and it is best there should be a veil to conceal them; and though it may be best that it should sometimes be withdrawn, I am glad it is not my province to tear it away. There is a great difference between concealment and hypocrisy, though by many they are considered synonymous. There are many things in individuals and communities which it is quite proper to conceal, though there are necessary occasions or circumstances when it is proper to pretend to be what one is not. Yet it is not always hypocrisy to observe forms and ceremonies when the heart is not interested. External restraint is necessary to the great mass of people; and though many who help to fill churches have hearts which, "like fools' eyes, are wandering to and fro," and they have no interest in the solemn services of the sanctuary, it is still best they should go. It is a salutary discipline of mind and heart. I cannot contradict those who say these ladies go to church to show their fine dresses or to see their beaus, but I can say, if they do, it is better they should go with this motive than not at all. The Sabbath is a blessed day, whether it is a holy one or not.

We must have a great dinner, of course, and cooks and waiters can scarcely realize that it is a day of rest; yet even in Mr. Pennypoor's premises there is evidence that the day is remembered. The pots and kettles and pans do not rattle quite so unscrupulously, and the ten thousand plates and et cateras receive their appointments with much less parade. There can be no miracle wrought to multiply a few loaves and fishes to an abundance for five hundred people. The humdrum process of cooking and serving must be performed, and it is sufficient that it is done as quietly as possible.

The noise of gleeful children may be heard in the yard, but where else can they so properly spend Sunday? It would be the height of cruelty to confine them within the narrow rooms which must necessarily be parlor, bedroom and nursery, all in one, where the domicil is a great hotel. They would be restless and fretful themselves, and make others restless and fretful, and thereby commit more sin than in romping glad and free beneath these spreading boughs. How happy they look, twenty or thirty little ones, almost all in white frocks and blue ribbons; at the age of childish innocence and in the very height of childish joy.

The time for white cravats has only just arrived. Ministers cannot come till vacation commences, but by another Sabbath there will be a flock of them, and no class of people enjoy Saratoga life with such a zest as they. I always feel sorry that only a few, such as live in cities and have large salaries, can afford to come. So universal is the effect of technical theology to starch the mind and heart and soul and body, and I never saw anything but Congress water that would effectually take it out. Starched things are never graceful and never agreeable; it is not pleasant coming in contact with them—they rattle and break but never bend. Religion should not be a matter of duty but a matter of love, and those who render God service because it is a command rather than because it is a delight, find piety a terrible burden; and it is because so many assume it with these ideas that they so constantly belie their professions. The filial obedience which is the result only of fear, is worth very little, and the conjugal fidelity which is rendered from a sense of duty is a brittle reed on which to rest honor and happiness. The faith which does not engage the heart cannot preserve it, or influence the life, whether it be in our relations to God or man.

Christ said, "My yoke is easy and my burden is light," but the way his servants usually represent it, makes it seem anything but this. It is impossible for youth to be what ordinary religionists require. They may try, as they often do, but it is a cold, heartless homage they render to Him who wishes the mind and heart and soul, and accepts only what is done in love. In trying to be duty-Christians they become formalists and hypocrites, and, oh! how many go down to infidelity, when with right ideas of a religion which is all life and love and beauty, they would be genial, hearty and cordial worshippers, diffusing light and joy around and leading multitudes to God.

But I did not mean to preach a sermon because it is Sunday, though I know not but I have as good a right to preach Sunday as wiser people. At least, I can spend only the morning in this way; I must go to church this afternoon; but I shall not say where, as my Presbyterian friends would think it the unpardonable sin to attend the Episcopal Church, even to hear the venerable Dr. Berrian, who is to officiate. I must not go to St. Nicholas Hall to hear Mr. Conway of Washington, because he is a Unitarian. My waiter at table is a minister, and black as jet, but I must not think of hearing him, because he is a Methodist and Arminian to poison. There are grand sermonizers at the Catholic Church, but I have no inclination to go there. Where shall one go to be sure and hear the truth without alloy?

I will dress, and then decide; and whether it is the truth which is disguised or not, the churches are full to overflowing. At Union Hall, those who are cheery sing psalms, but here there are some sufficiently merry to sing at all. There are little knots and groups in every corner, but whether they are discussing theology or more interesting matters, I cannot tell. A few I heard discussing the costly viands at our table, but I listened only long enough to hear one remark, which was that of an old lady who confessed herself satisfied with all that was provided, though she was not much of an epicure! I gave a second glance, thinking I might possibly have seen the genuine Mrs. Partington, but whether she is here or not, I am not able to state.

Newport, R. I., Tuesday, July 24, 1855.

A great accession to our society are the newly-arrived diplomats from Washington, who, last year, were the preferred companions of all who think intelligent conversation is better than idle gossip, and high breeding a greater accomplishment than to dance the polka. The Swedish, Belgian and Prussian Chargés are all here. We miss the genial Sardinian whose Italian comments on the American cuisine were so amusing; but his confrères are the same agreeable, unassuming, and cultivated associates. These gentlemen find the air and the scope here refreshing to mind and body, after two hot months in deserted Washington; they have only sad feelings about the Eastern war—apparently more alive to the sympathies of man than the prejudice of country, in regard to a conflict so barren, on either side, of true glory, so prolific of death and suffering, and so doubtful of good however it result. Bishop Chase lays the cornerstone of a new Episcopal Church here to-day. Professors Agassiz and Felton are visiting at a private residence near by. The former's subscription for his great work on American National History, is much encouraged here. Nearly all the prosperous residents have subscribed. This work will contain a vast amount of original research. The author never expected his papers, which are the result of years of patient exploration in all parts of the United States, would see the light during his life. He intended them as a legacy to his family. The gain to natural science, and the illustration of our country's resources in that department, by their publication under his supervision, will be incalculable. Your wealthy and tasteful citizens ought to subscribe largely to this noble enterprise. The basket-man, the ivory-peddler and the card-writer have reappeared at the hotels; the rich Mexican, with his four in hand turn out, makes the wet sand fly again on the beach; red flannel is in demand for piscatorial purposes; and thus, you see, we are approaching that climax toward which veer the desires of fair and foolish—"the height of the season." In my last I sketched a Philadelphian of the masculine gender—now let me introduce you to one of the softer sex.

There is a fair Baltimorean; you identify her by a certain frank gentleness, by an absence of pretension, and by the sweetest and most natural attractions of her sex. She has not the hardihood nor the style of her New-York rivals; there is less of general aspect, but far more of homebred and feminine grace. She is thoroughly amiable; her smile is winning, her costume modest, her voice "gentle and low—an excellent thing in woman;" without the mental culture of the Bostonian, or the exclusively tasteful charm of the Philadelphian, there is something more girlish, quietly cheerful and unconsciously pleasant about her. Her affability is caught from habitual intercourse with domestic characters—from truly social, friendly relations, and not from promiscuous or showy associations. She makes you think of a happy fireside and a loving companion; you imagine her name to be Mary, and think it would be the most natural and charming thing in the world to make it your household word. She does not seem in the least ambitious or hackneyed, or complacent, but altogether the most delectable of "human nature's daily food," without the remote possibility of ever becoming either a blue-stocking, a shrew, or a strong-minded woman. In a word, she is lovable. Whether it is owing to the medium latitude of Baltimore—not so far south as to induce languor, nor so far north as to generate over activity—it is difficult to say; but certain it is, that the women of that City unite the graces of the sex more harmoniously, than those of any other American metropolis. They are less angular, emphatic, knowing, and more feminine, affectionate and ingenuous than our other belles. Seldom brilliant, they are invariably lovely; fair to look upon, they are pleasant to know; and seem at once like Desdemona's idol, good to "live with," and as she was to her dusky lord—a comfort, to which no parallel "succeeds in unknown fate." The "Highland Mary" of Burns, the "Lucy" of Wordsworth, and the "Miller's Daughter" of Tennyson, suggest no image which clashes with the impression we derive from a genuine Baltimore beauty in girlhood;—but who can associate either with the clever, self-possessed Bostonian, or the flashy, worldly-wise Gothamite? There is not much in the way of chivalrous or romantic ideas connected with Baltimore; the liberality of her Catholic founder, the graphic pen of Kennedy, the legal fame of Pinckney, and the few but graceful poems of his namesake, may, indeed, recall a degree of local inspiration; but in most memories it is her gentle, kindly and lovely women that redeem her name. A bevy of these, last year, justly carried away the palm at Newport; their manners, looks and spirit were in such attractive contrast to the more confident pretenders to belleship. We see yet where their poet, in former days, found the impulse to that "Health" he wrote "to one made up of loveliness alone."

The finest promenade in Newport is the long, natural embankment at right angles with the beach and parallel with the ocean, called "The Cliffs." Imagine a plateau of meadow three miles in extent, and always clear of dwellings, two hundred yards back from its outer edge; the seaward line with intervals of cape and inlet, here bounded by picturesque crags, and there sloping gradually to the shore; the back-ground studded with country seats varying in size and material, from the segment of a granite castle to a plain brown cottage; the intervening slope green with the freshest herbage, with, here and there, a patch of maize waving like emerald plumes in the breeze, or a neat vegetable garden where potatoes, ruddy beet leaves, tomatoes, sweet peas and okra flourish in luxuriant array; or a clump of silver poplars lift their shining leaves to the sun, and a well-trimmed lawn is radiant with mosaic circles of verbena, heliotrope and roses. The stone walls and iron fences that mark the boundaries of each domain, intersect, at long intervals. This esplanade is known to the habitués by some inviting name—"Ocean Point," "Fern Cliff," etc. An attempt to block up the "right of way" through one of these division walls, though repeatedly tried last Summer, was abandoned at last, as the stone-work was mysteriously battered down at night; the townsfolks had enjoyed the path too long and its use was guaranteed in the original deeds. As one strolls along this beautiful beach of table land, the illimitable expanse of sea on one side, cheering rural objects around, and the elastic turf beneath,—he can recall, however traveled a man, few walks of superior natural attractions. Against the clear horizon, if he looks seaward, only a distant sail or the wing of a gull prints the far-looming mist; inland rise the wooded or cultured domes of symmetrical bay-shores, before against some stalking wing of wave-worn rock, dashes the receding surge, or breaks on the low margin of a lapping wave from a pebbly inlet; on a ledge covered with dripping kelp stands a patient angler watching the glassy brine which around his tackle; on the glistening sand of a sheltered cove are grouped a band of children, arranging in their aprons sea-moss, or bits of smooth quartz and jasper, and in another nook is seated a pair of lovers, the youth drawing initials with his cane on the sand, and the maiden pretending to be absorbed in the landscape; reminding the spectator of the old song about the Spanish girl who then traced on the banks of the Guadiquivir, "Love, not hieroglyphics;" and perhaps of Hawthorne's little Pearl dancing in imitation of the waves beside her unnatural mother. Where the cliff descends in a perpendicular wall of rock, and the hungry sea gains fast upon its base, he is minded of that thrilling adventure related in the Antiquary, when the hearse was drawn up from the embrace of the rising tide, under the wild auspices of Edie Ochiltree. If a true lover of nature, not an object meets his eye without suggestive beauty: in the egg shaped pebbles is the germ of an architectural element; in the scent of the fleeting weed he detects the latent iodine: in the granite crag a geological lesson; in the air-poised flocks of down a seed vessel; in the convoy of wild fowl a migratory law; in the mirage a secret of aerial perspective; and in the limitless view—where sky and water coalesce—a hint of eternity. With the poet, he exclaims "The surf shall be my frequent chalice.' No organ ever breathed such repentant strains or an anthem so sublime as the melancholy and everlasting refrain of that booming surge; no holy water ever laved his brow with a more consecrating touch than these drops of gelid spray; and no human temple could awe his heart with deeper reverence than this, whose boundless roof is hung in air, whose crystal floor is forever renewed, and in whose incense blend the pure exhalations of earth and sea.

Philadelphia Affairs—City Finances—Department, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

Philadelphia, Friday, July 27, 1855.

It is a fact that an attentive reader of your valuable paper would know more of the internal condition of London or Paris, of the largest and furthest capital cities, than of some of the places nearest at hand and closest in interest. There is a deal of valuable matter, occurrence in municipal experiments and experience, judicial and legal difficulties and solutions, commercial and moral crises, literary and scientific intelligence, manufacturing and mechanic detail, that is disguised and colored out of natural and real strength, by the peculiar political disposition of the public press here, the want of capacity to offer a resume either honest or clear, or the anxiety to overslaugh such matters as the they know are not entirely creditable, or positively to their city's injury, but to their own profit. What is less understood than the condition of the finances of this great city, its resources and revenue, its expenditures and economy? The news of financial difficulties come fast on the heels of new reforms in the whole policy and polity of the place. From a score of struggling, quarreling, inefficient bodies corporate, varying not less in size, capacity, numbers or strength than in politics, principles, people and preferences, there was created a vast city of half a million of people, exceeding in area almost the largest cities of the old world or the new, and subject to the management of new hands, fresh officers and strange laws. Under these circumstances it is not astonishing that the resources of the city should not be fully developed and yet be extravagantly estimated, that the expenditures of the city should be largely increased, and the ordinary calls upon its Treasury largely exceeded. It is impossible from our public journals, confined and limited by the chance of continuing or obtaining a hold on the public purse, to get a clear or full statement of these difficulties, and our official documents seem to be affected more by political prospects, the means of securing public favor and official continuance, than by any fixed and positive laws of calculation. It is a fixed fact that the interest of the city loan was paid by obtaining money from banks with which the city accounts were long ago overdrawn. It is a fact, the most pressing demands on the Treasury are daily presented and daily refused, while political favorites are sure to get something of the moneys that come slowly and gradually into the Receiver's coffers. The people of this city were so deeply moved by these facts, that new Councilmen were chosen on pledges of reducing the city expenditures, and it is to this end that every citizen is looking anxiously for his own ease and security; it is in this that every one trading with or dealing in this city is interested—but what efforts are making for this object? A Chief Magistrate who does not comprehend, much less practice, the simplest rule of personal economy, can neither suggest nor tolerate public prudence. Business men are and are wisely moving this matter. No later than yesterday afternoon, in the Select Council, there was an elaborate debate on a bill to reduce the Police Force; it was stated, that to support nine hundred men costs over half a million of money, while the sum spent on the Public Schools of the city falls short of that sum by fifty thousand dollars; it was proved that this body of nine hundred men is inefficient from very excess of numbers, imperfectly organized for their real duties, but completely drilled into the management of elections; and yet there is no prospect of either reduction or alteration.

The great aim of the Consolidation Bill was to create Departments for the management each of a distinctive portion of municipal duty, to have Councils to legislate for their creation, direction and support, whose Committees should be the means of communications between them,—instead of this, the Heads of Departments are supposed to be mere cyphers, intended to do only the work ordered and prepared either by councils, or by its separate conclaves sitting in Committee, and planning and suggesting how to create political capital out of the operations of each office and every corps of officers, and how to obtain pecuniary benefit out of every piece of business or city job in any wise coming within sight or sound of the object of their supervision. Honest, earnest, diligent Councilmen labor to carry out the general purposes of efficient City Government, but clogged by the necessity of a prudent economy, and galled by the exercise of a reckless abuse of city credit, affairs go on as of old, and in the midst of much declamation as to Reform, and many strenuous endeavors to economize, there is a persistent increase in excess of all estimates of revenue, a continual want of legislation required, by the peculiar differences in the outlying rural districts, to fetch up these revenues to their maximum, and withal, a sense of the determination of all classes to maintain city credit and city honor. How can credit be honestly or wisely maintained, while the Finance Committee report that for the current year there is a cash deficit of $534,462 21, and that the aggregate deficit is $1,062,681 32. If this fact be well known abroad, if the speculative price of city Loans be temporarily lessened, if the hard lesson of a bad money character be once taught, then there can be hope of ever getting some small share of reduction in expenditures of this sort:

Highways	$281,864 71	City of Consolidation	20,000 00
Police	168,000 00	Public lamps	100,000 00
Markets	16,000 00	Fire Companies
City Commissioners	242,716 21	Contingencies	150,000 00

and smaller items, with some indigestibly and wisely large, swelling the whole expenses for 1855 to to $2,630,144 50.

If this be of interest abroad, it will serve to explain a long list of peculiarities in Philadelphia politics and management, that may yet come to this end that of first simply stating the financial condition of the City and following it up by giving the accounts of public business,—privately mismanaged it may be, or perhaps well managed. A season of City commissions is now to be entertained, to solve right return for the immense trouble in municipal improvements that New-York daily offers to every other large city, and in the hopes of improving and securing the authority and independence of the City of Gotham and the city of _____. A Word about the Army—The Americans on _____—Sewer work in the Crimea.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Dear Sir:—Two or three topics of interest have recently appeared, respecting our army and its officers; and it certainly is due to the persons concerned, the Government, and the public, to place them in their proper light, and to insure their being generally seen and appreciated in their proper and distinctive characters.

And first, I was astonished to see in your paper a strong criticism of the action of our Government in sending out three officers to the seat of war to examine and report upon the siege operations at Sebastopol.

War has become a trade; its noble bearings and necessities are lost sight of in the details of its exciting business. In this it is scarcely similar to all those professions which originate in and exist because of the infirmity of human nature. Some guess, for instance, will cluster in groups around some rare and wonderful operation, and depict the patient, his sufferings, his life even, in the expectation and order of the scientific pupils. Lawyers and advocates will subvert the order of logic and assuming a conclusion, work back for premises by which to substantiate it; and when some striking case is upon the docket they will come from the least cities even, not to see the principal captured or deserted, and to sympathize with him—not to insure the plaintiff or the defendant—but to see the adroitness of the pleaders, to hear the subtlety of the human mind, and to record new triumphs in the noble science of civil government.

Thus it is in war. Founded on it is upon the plague spot of our nature, necessary only because of human passion, it is still a noble profession, one whose moral questions come out at war, is an elective, transcending, all-invading, vocation; making the most difficult sciences subservient,—bringing into constant, daily, accurate use, the mathematics, chemistry, geology, geography, mechanics, metallurgy in its most practical forms, political economy, and history, the greatest science of them all. The soldier, leaving for others to settle the ethics of war, undertakes this profession, and pursues it with the order which is naturally instinct. His appetite grows by what it feeds on; his potent arm applies the difficult elements; his learning and his powers united, form the bulwark of his country.

But to refer these general remarks to particular examples. It is indisputable that the siege of Sebastopol promises to be the great siege in modern history; even now in duration, in loss of life, in numbers engaged, in the succession of battles, it has no equal; San Sebastian, Ciudad Rodrigo, Tarragona, Saguntum and Antwerp sink into insignificance; the military glories of Italy, coupled with the genius of Napoleon, and winning back a whole empire in one consummate battle, pale before the magnificent strategy not of Russians nor Allies, nor neutral powers, but of Him who works wonders in Heaven and earth. It is scarcely bold to assert that Providence has constituted Sebastopol the key of European destiny. It allows in one grand combination, France at home, England at home and in India, Russia in her march to the conquest of the Mediterranean,—America in her designs upon Cuba, Mexico, and the Spanish main,—and last as well as least in significance, the Turks, who are to be driven from their six centuries' encampment in Europe, back to their Asiatic wanderings.

I might allude to other causes which render the siege of Sebastopol a great world problem, only incidentally more important and interesting to the combatants than to us, but I have said enough.

To see such a siege, to understand thoroughly the terms and data of such a problem, to aid in perfecting the art of war, (the more perfect it becomes, the more peaceful is its influence,) our Government sends out three officers admirably chosen for their acquirements, in perfect bona fides—a liberal and liberalizing action, which we were scarcely prepared to expect from the present department.

It was thought that there could be no objection whatever to this plan. In our relations with France there had been precedents established; our officers had been admitted into French schools of military practice; the distinguished Professor of Civil and Military Engineering at West Point, Mr. Mahan, was at their schools of Engineering; Colonel Hamner and Colonel Beale were in the Cavalry Schools—ordered out by our Government, and received by theirs; and Major Philip Kearney and Captain Knowlton campaigned with the French in Algiers.

Every suspicion of bad faith must have been absent, by reason of the national credentials of the officers recently sent. It is absurd to fancy even that we could have any oblique object in the mission.

Now, what possible reason can exist, or be even supposed, for refusing them admittance to the trenches before Sebastopol, or into Sebastopol itself? None but a vague, mean and selfish jealousy; or, what is meaner and more selfish, but by no means vague, the churlish spirit which says, "We have the power to keep you out, and we will, and though 'reasons were as plenty as blackberries,' we will give you none except upon compulsion."

I have not been speaking simply of the proprieties which might be expected under the circumstances; but it is a source of pleasure to find in your paper of to-day a paragraph from the Washington Union, recounting the kind attentions of our officers by the Russian officials, and the cordial invitations extended to them to visit St. Petersburg and the Crimea.

I have extended this topic further than I designed; with your approbation of this, I shall take another opportunity to mention and enlarge upon those which still remain.

Your constant reader, Regular.

Railroad Accident.—The passenger train on the Worcester Railroad which left Providence at 4½ o'clock Thursday afternoon, met with an accident a short distance beyond Woonsocket. In passing round the curve at the entrance of a deep cut, the engineer discovered a large mass of rock lying upon the track. He had hardly time to sound the alarm when the engine struck the rock. The speed was such as to force the locomotive partly over the obstruction, when it was thrown down the track. The engineer, Mr. Paisson, remained at his post, and escaped further injury than some slight bruises. The engine was a new one, the "Providence," and was badly damaged. The second class passenger car also sustained considerable damage, the platforms being smashed by the collision. The other two cars were uninjured. The damage to the engine and car does not probably exceed $1,000.

The escape of the passengers was a fortunate one under the circumstances. He was received any injury beyond a violent jarring, except the messenger of Rose's Express, who was slightly bruised. The accident was caused by the falling of a large rock weighing several tons, which had become detached from the side of the cut.

Another hero of the Revolution passed away a few days ago, in Fort Plain, Montgomery County, in this State, in the death of Gen. Geo. H. Neelin, who was a fifer in one of the Revolutionary Regiments. During the term of his service he fought in several engagements with the Indians. In the War of 1812 he served one year on Colonel Dodge's staff, at the Regiment sent to guard and defend Sackets Harbor. He was afterwards, for several years, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas in Montgomery County. For more 30 years he was a Justice of the Peace.

The Utica Gazette remarks that Rev. M. A. Wheaton, Rector of Calvary Church, in that city, has received a call to take charge of a new parish about to be organized in Rochester.

THE "JOSEPH WALKER" COMMITTEE.

Examination of Witnesses—Alderman Moser on the Position of Alderman Ely—The Committee—Their Investigations are Independent—Alderman Covert on the Cause—Testimony—Same Notice of Mr. Covert—Second Plenary.

The investigation of the Committee of the Board of Aldermen in to the contract made for the raising of the Joseph Walker, set yesterday, (Monday,) and continued their investigation. Present: Alderman ELY (in the Chair) and VOORHIS.

Alderman Ely—I have in consence that Alderman Varian, by a letter addressed to the Chairman of the Committee, states that, owing to severe indisposition, it will be utterly impossible for him to meet with the Committee sooner than a week from this day. He further states that the Committee adjourn until one week from this day. The Committee would be very glad to assent to the request of Alderman Varian, but as there are some two or three witnesses here that want to leave town, and whose testimony is deemed not of great importance, but will simply go to establish a fact or two already spoken of, the Committee have thought it their duty, under all the circumstances—these parties being merchants, and their time of great value to them—to hear them. But if anything should occur that would seem to open the subject in any important light, it shall be held on to for a time. For that reason, I would suggest to those gentlemen (Messrs. John P. White and Richard Busted, commission,) that we have had an interview with Alderman Moser, without, it would not be better, as we do not intend at this time to go into this subject much at length, to delay any notice? I am only sorry at Alderman Varian's not being present, as he has been somewhat prominent in that branch of the subject that these two gentlemen have appeared here touching. I think, if we proceeded on that subject, he would have good reason to upbraid the Committee with the want of usual courtesy.

J. P. White, Esq., appearing for Alderman Moser—If the Committee please, it would be gratifying to me, so far as I am concerned, and for those I appear, to have Mr. Varian present; in truth, I should prefer not to have the investigation go on without him. I appear before the Committee this afternoon to prove the falsity of some statements made by the witness Jones, reflecting on the official character of a member of your Board. Of course, in appearing, I am authorized to say that they are totally untrue, and am here to ask you to give him an opportunity to show that he has been unjustly belied and maligned. I cheerfully concur with the suggestion of one of the Committee, but I must request that in the event of Alderman Moser, his counsel or his witnesses are not present when Alderman Varian shall be with you, you will extend to him the courtesy which the occasion requires.

Alderman Ely—The Committee suggest that, in their judgment, before we could go into any real testimony on the subject, there should be an affidavit submitted to the Committee stating in general, and, as far as practicable, [illegible] is stated that has been so [illegible] opportunity might be afforded [illegible] we should be ready to-day to [illegible] and I would take care that a copy [illegible] of Alderman Varian, [illegible] all the facts. [illegible] state that such an affidavit is in process of preparation, and I should have had it ready to be engrossed, but at the next meeting such a document will be forthcoming. Alderman Moser will present such a statement, under oath, of course, as to those falsifications which he states were made.

Alderman Ely—I would observe that the Committee are not ready to go into any proof of the veracity of witnesses.

R. Busted, Esq.—We will not present that.

Alderman Ely—We will receive the affidavit, and will endeavor to do what we ourselves should think was right for us under the circumstances.

Mr. White—We purpose also to give the Committee some information on the very matters under investigation.

Alderman Ely—We shall be very happy to receive any such. We shall examine some witnesses, more especially to-day, as to the opinions of those around as to whether the existence of the vessel being a nuisance and detrimental to health.

Mr. Busted—No examination to-day will touch on Alderman Moser.

Mr. W. R. Jones—That gentleman has stated that I have testified to something incorrect. I want to know if he speaks of his own knowledge, or for Alderman Moser.

Mr. White—I make these statements on the strength of what has been presented to me by gentlemen who will present themselves as witnesses in due time. I would further remark that I am fully authorized to say what I stated.

Mr. A. G. Smees, of No. 20 South-street, being sworn, says: I know where the Joseph Walker is sunk, and am familiar with the locality; I have been about the place many times since she was sunk; I have never discovered anything offensive arising from that wreck which was detrimental to public health; I mean to say that she was at one time pumped down under the auspices of Mr. Ball, and then there was a very offensive odor; she might have laid under water forever without endangering the public health; when Mr. Ball took the contract I advanced him money by advice of Walter R. Jones, deceased, who thought him "sure, but slow;" the money was expended in attempts to raise the vessel; I supposed that when the wreck should get up I should have a claim on the proceeds for salvage; the wreck proposed to collect it was this, I should go to the Common Council and ask for a contract, and by that means retrieve the amount already spent on her. In a conversation with Mr. Jones he thought he could get such a contract for me; he said he would go to work and do it, but from time to time he said he had done nothing, but I soon heard that he had done something, and spoke to him of it, when he told me he had to make a different arrangement; I have not thought enough about any claim I may have to be able to give a definite answer.

W. S. Babridge sworn, says: I do business directly in front of the place where the Joseph Walker has sunk; I have been some years in that locality; I have never discovered anything that jeopardized the health of any one, nor have ever heard any one complain of any such nuisance.

Mr. Owen called,—did not respond.

George H. Covert called and sworn.

Alderman Ely announced that if any question put, should in anywise tend to criminate, of course there is no expectation that it will be answered. More than that, if any question is not supposed to be right in itself, we shall not insist on an answer. I mention this because I really do not know why Mr. Covert is brought up before this Committee at all. It was at the suggestion of my associates. I can scarcely conceive why we should propound any questions, or how we have the right to.

Witness—I know nothing of the contract at all.

Alderman Ely—Do you know anything of the raising of the Joseph Walker, as referred to the Committee on Wharves and Slips, or did you know it was so reported?

Witness—I asked the question myself, and I also heard so.

Alderman Ely—Can you see the Committee of whom you made the inquiry?

Witness—I made the inquiry of Alderman Moser.

Alderman Ely—Did you have any conversation with Alderman Moser on the subject?

Witness—I did, Sir.

Alderman Ely—Did you volunteer or had you any understanding with Alderman Moser that you were to make any inquiries or overtures to any one?

Witness—No, Sir. I volunteered to make inquiries as to the Joseph Walker myself.

Alderman Ely—Did you call on any person about it?

Witness—I accidentally met Mr. Robert L. Lane in front of George M. Brown's.

Alderman Ely—Are you willing to relate the conversation that occurred?

Witness—Certainly.

Alderman Ely—Were there any others round you at the time?

Witness—There were some half dozen persons, but I doubt if they heard.

Alderman Ely—Did you ever suggest to Mr. Lane to call on Mr. Jones?

Witness—No, Sir, he suggested that himself.

Alderman Ely—Do you know for what purpose he made that visit?

Witness—To talk of the Joseph Walker, I suppose, that was the subject; there is no secrecy about me.

Alderman Ely—Suppose you give us your version.

Witness—I said to Mr. Lane that I had a conversation with Alderman Moser as to the Joseph Walker; I said to Mr. Lane this: Mr. Lane, I understand from Alderman Moser that the Joseph Walker is to be raised by the Common Council in some certain number of days, (some 30 or 40 or 60 days, I believe, but I cannot tell,) and I came down here to see you, you being a schoolmate of mine, and I can talk to you freely on the subject; I told him that I thought that I could stop the resolution in the Board of Aldermen; I mean that I told this to Mr. Lane; I said that I should like to see Mr. Jones on the subject; Mr. Lane then left me and went and found Jones and brought him into Brown's door, or it might have been next door, but it was in that vicinity.

Alderman Ely—What did you and Mr. Jones both say?

Witness—I did not say much to Mr. Jones any way; Mr. Lane did all the talking; only when a remark was made by Mr. Lane to me and Mr. Jones that it would take six or seven hundred dollars, I said, Yes, I thought so; I thought that my labor was worth that; I am in the market for anything of the kind.

Alderman Ely—Was that to stop it?

Witness—I did not state what it was for; I did not say that.

Alderman Ely—Well?

Witness—Well, Sir, it was for my services.

Alderman Ely—Did you ever have any conversation with any other Alderman on this subject.

Witness—Never in my life, now I want you to put in, not with any other person or man that is a public official nor any man that holds public office.

Alderman Ely—True, doubtless, but I, for instance, might make such arrangements with somebody outside.

Witness—Aldermen, I do not do so, I do my own work.

Alderman Ely—Did you ever request Alderman Moser to hold on to this resolution or to keep the report back?

Witness—That is it; you have not asked me of anything as to my conversation with Moser.

Alderman Ely—We do not want to ask everything; narrate it.

Witness—I want you to ask your questions. I met Alderman Moser in front of the City Hall and asked that he would give me a manual for this year, some week or ten days before this thing got a going; I came up in front of the City Hall and we went to Sherwood's; I asked him what he intended to do with the Joseph Walker; I do not know, he says to me, I do not know really what to do with this one; it is a difficult case. I want to give you this as it occurred; not anything more.

Alderman Ely—Of course.

Witness—It was my conversation, not any one's else; He then said, my friend Lane is somewhat interested in this matter. Well, Sir, now I am going to give you my answer.—I said Mr. Lane was a schoolmate of mine, and that I would go and see him and Mr. Jones thereupon. He said, do so, and then in all the conversation that I ever had with Moser on this subject. I never called on him again, and I never had another interview with him on the subject. That is all I can give you; that is everything that I remember.

Alderman Voorhis—Did you ever get the six or seven hundred dollars?

Witness—No. I did not get it; if I had I should have tried it. Where I think I can make a thousand dollars out of a matter I do it, whether it be Jones or Ely; for I would make it out of him if I could.

Alderman Ely—Where was the last place, as far as you can recollect, that you had conversation with Mr. Lane on the subject?

Witness—I only had the one.

Alderman Ely—How, with Alderman Moser?

Witness—I never saw him about it but once; I never spoke to any Alderman living on the top of the earth as to the matters.

Alderman Ely—What services did you expect to render for this money?

Witness—That was in my own mind after I got the money secured.

Alderman Ely—After you got the money?

Witness—Sir, I never asked for the money.

Alderman Ely—My question was, "What services did you expect to render?"

Witness—That was an after consideration—when I got the one I could soon arrange about the other—to think of a consideration for that my attention.

Alderman Voorhis—Was Alderman Moser interested directly or indirectly with you in the matter?

Witness—In no wise at all; I told you all the conversation I had with him in my life on the matter.

Alderman Voorhis—Had he ever requested you to get for any money?

Witness—No, Sir.

Alderman Ely—Was there any understanding between you?

Witness—No, Sir.

Alderman Ely—If you had got any money, would you have given it to him?

Witness—Now you ask me too much; that is my own business; it is my private matter; I do not think that you should get into that; I believe I have the right to do my own private business as I choose, as long as I do not interfere with your position; I do this often, when I can.

Alderman Voorhis—You have some business with the Committee on Wharves and Piers, have you not?

Witness—Yes, I have had some; I should have called on you, and all of you, to have done my best in this matter; I would have persuaded you if I could, that the vessel could not be got up in the time specified.

Alderman Voorhis—Your object then was to gain more time?

Witness—That it was.

Alderman Voorhis—You were doing business on your own hook; last year you could not have done such a business?

Witness—I was out of the way, then; I would do the same for you if you wanted it.

Captain Junius S. Lewis, sworn: My principal business is raising sunken vessels; it has been so for fifteen years; I have had a contract to raise the Joseph Walker; I made that contract with Thomas Bell; he represented himself to me as the contractor of the underwriters on whom the vessel was thrown after she was burned; hearing that this Committee was appointed to investigate the matter, I thought you could not be fully posted up till I was examined, and so I presented myself here; Bell had been making efforts to raise the wreck by putting canvas round her previous to my introducing myself as a purchaser; I purchased one-half of Bell's interest in his contract with the underwriters, and took charge of the work of raising; after spending two weeks in this effort I abandoned that, and introduced my plan of raising her with vessels inside and outside, having chains beneath the ship, in which plan I was successful, and carried her from the outer end of the pier up into the slip, say one hundred and fifty feet, having the bow of the ship so far out of water that it needed no elevation to be pumped out; all that was requisite was that the stern should be raised to the same elevation; at this time, during the Summer solstice, we had found no unpleasant odor from any decomposing substances in the ship, be it cotton, corn, or wheat, we then stirring the wheat to the very bottom; we took fifteen bales of cotton, or thereabouts, out, and it was sold at auction in Wall-street; at that stage of the proceedings we were obliged to change our plan of operations, and having other business, the work was suspended during the coldest part of the Winter; I recommenced work early in April, having had men in charge of the vessel during all the Winter; I resumed work under the contract with Mr. Bell, and a verbal one from Mr. W. R. Jones, of the Atlantic Insurance Company, now deceased; the work was continued until we were interrupted by parties representing themselves as coming from the Mayor, and dispossessed us, taking a vessel from within the Joseph Walker to the head of the slip, where she now lies sunk in some thirty-five to forty feet of water; previous to be dispossessed I was called on by Walter R. Jones, Jr., who said to had bought a wrecking schooner, and had a captain on her, and he wanted them employed, he, therefore, wanted to purchase a part of my interest in the Joseph Walker; he gave me plenty of soft soap, and got all the information he wanted, as I supposed he was anxious to be equal to my partner as he said; this was about ten days before we were dispossessed, it must have been about the 15th of April.

Alderman Ely—Who personated the Mayor in this matter?

Witness—I think it was Thomas Doyle, the Dockmaster; I was not present.

Mr. Jones—Had you been there for a week or ten days previous?

Witness—Yes, I was there three or four days before;

Witness—After being thus dispossessed I came up and called on the Mayor at his office; he had been seen on my account by Alderman Lord, and had expressed to the Alderman his willingness to communicate all the facts to me in relation to the matter of the dispossession; after stating to the Mayor how I was situated in the vessel, he remarked that he had not known my position before; if he had known he would not have made the contract that he did; I asked him if I could have a sight of that contract; he said the papers were with Mr. Furey, in the Street Commissioner's Office, and he would send for them for my perusal; he also said that he had been urged on to this measure by publications and petitions representing the wreck to be a nuisance, and one that would jeopardize public health if left to decompose; I called again and again off and on for two weeks, and the papers were not forthcoming; and was then told by Mr. Furey that I had no right to the papers; that I had made a speculation like unto betting on a horse-race, and had lost my venture, and had no further interest there, and could not be allowed to have a view of the papers; my object was to see where to look for redress, and on whom I could put my finger as a responsible party who dispossessed me; I was pretty well convinced that I could not without law or gospel be dispossessed of a vessel on which I spent so much time and labor and money, without having some responsible party to call on for redress; after calling on the Mayor five or six times I was referred to the Street Commissioners, and he kept me running, saying that the papers were at the City Hall, until finally I got the answer that I have stated; I told the Mayor that I had expended large sums, and that I had removed her from her very bad position to where I could have raised her in a very few days, and discharged the cargo; I told him I wanted to find who I could hold responsible; he said nothing to me about any redress that I had; he was sorry that he was committed, and that he could not recall what had taken place; he said that he had consulted with the Comptroller or some other official person.

Alderman Ely—Do you believe, on your oath, that long before this time, if you had been left alone, the Joseph Walker would have been raised?

Witness—I believe that by the 15th June the vessel would have been raised, the cargo sold and the vessel disposed of, if I had not been dispossessed; every intelligent man to whom I have exhibited the plan has affirmed it by admitting its feasibility; more than seven-eighths of the work had been done when I was interfered with; the putting of the chains under was half of the work.

Mr. Jones—We had to put new ones.

Witness resumed—I never attempted to raise a vessel but I carried it out; I have raised fifty; when I left it would not have taken more than $1,000 to complete the entire job; I was to receive payment on my contract in the shape of salvage both upon cargo and vessel; the rate had been agreed upon; if I had succeeded in carrying out my contract there would have been no reason, that I am now aware of, why I should have called upon the City for one cent; I never felt more aggrieved in my life than when I was thus robbed (as I deem it) of my hard earnings.

Alderman Ely—About what amount do you consider you are the loser in having been thus dispossessed of your contract?

Witness—As near as I can possibly estimate it, I have suffered, pecuniarly, by the transaction, to the amount of $6,000.

Alderman Ely—Do you intend making an effort to recover your losses?

Witness—I mean to endeavor, not only to get back that $6,000, but also all that the vessel and cargo was worth when she was taken from me.

Alderman Ely—From whom do you expect to get this indemnity?

Witness—From the parties who dispossessed me, whoever they may be; as now advised, I believe the responsible parties, (in the matter of my dispossession,) to have been the Corporation of the City of New-York; the Corporation, I believe, has made itself responsible through the Board of Health, which body, I believe, confirmed the Mayor's action; when I called upon the Street Commissioner several times, as I have before stated, I gave him to understand that I was endeavoring to find out who was the responsible party in the matter of my dispossession, that I might know who to look to to make good my loss; I think some one, too, besides myself must bear the loss of the brig, which, (as before stated,) was sunk in the slip; to raise her some slight effort was made in the way of pumping, but the hole which was knocked in her bottom was too large to admit of much being effected in that way.

Alderman Ely—Do you intend to sue, and whom do you intend to sue, to make good your losses?

Witness—I do intend to be made sound for all the losses I have suffered in connection with the Joseph Walker, by reason of this dispossession or interference, or by some one who is a resident of New-York to be responsible for, as now advised, I intend, also, to bring a suit against the Corporation for the recovery of my losses; in the conversations which I held with the Mayor in regard to this matter, he admitted to me that he believed the proceedings, on day on 7, appeared and to have been wrong; that he had been deceived, and, in fact, given to understand that the party who was endeavoring to raise the vessel (myself) had ceased operations entirely; he said, however, that he had power to overturn his action, should we recall it; I asked him if he could not (if he should be minded he had made) do what he could to put me in? I asked Mr. Jones get the contract from the Mayor his former kindly tone towards me was most decidedly changed; indeed, he expressed himself afterwards as being much surprised that I ever had a contract for the work, or a claim to one; in fact, I deem it the biggest piece of island piracy that ever I heard of, or had anything to do with.

Alderman Ely—Have you means to carry on the suit as you contemplate against the City?

Witness—I am a man of means and can carry out all I undertake.

Alderman Ely then (5 o'clock) announced that as there were no further witnesses present the Committee would in newspapers with Alderman Varian's request, adjourn over till Tuesday (not Monday) next, Aug. 7, at 3 o'clock P. M.

Foundling.

On the morning of Saturday, an infant was found in the front basement of the house No. 28 Second-street. It was conveyed to the Almshouse.

Police News.

ASSAULT AND BATTERY.

James Murphy, of No. 37 Oliver-street, was brought up in charge of officer Bennett, before Mr. Justice WELSH at the Tombs, yesterday morning, on suit of the Commissioners of Emigration, charged with an alleged assault upon John Shayne, infant, who asked for his wages. The affidavit set forth that said Murphy owed to three persons in his employ and under the charge of the Commission, respectively, $5, $6 and $11, which he refuses to pay, and that he best complainant for asking for it.

Murphy denied hiring the boy, but would not like to see him injured; had always been as good as a father to him, and would make him a present of two or three dollars, if his mother is in want; only took up a broom to frighten the boy; swore she knew he lives in.

Judge—Have you got bail here?

Defendant—If you let me go to the house I will give bail.

Judge—Do you own the property?

Defendant—I do not own it—it is not all redeemed.

Judge—You said you owned it.

Defendant—I own part of it; it is not redeemed yet.

Judge—Have you bought it?

Defendant—No; I did not buy it.

Judge—Do you own it?

Defendant—No, Sir. Committed.

PICKPOCKET.

A man, aged 21, named Edward L. White, a thief by profession, was yesterday caught in the act of picking the pocket of Dennis Mahon, while crossing the river on the Staten Island ferry-boat. Committed by Justice WELSH.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

Andrew Durdin, an Irish laborer, aged 60 years, on Sunday evening attempted to commit suicide by running a horse-shoe nail into the lower part of his stomach. It appears that Durdin was admitted to the Station-house on Saturday night as a lodger, and that he stayed in the Station-house since until he made the rash attempt to cast aside his earthly tenement. Dr. Thomas was called in, examined the wound, which he declared not to be dangerous. The injured man was properly cared for, and was sent to the Police Court for disposal as being insane.

FELONIOUS ASSAULT.

Policeman Sullivan, of the First Ward, arrested Michael Fallon, charged with having committed a felo*nious assault upon the person of John McCormick, of* No. 142 Cedar-street, with intent to kill. Held for examination by Justice WELSH.

FEMALE PUGILISTS ON THE HOUSE—FIGHT AND STAMPEDE ON BROADWAY.

Two nymphs of the pave, Adelia Anderson, resident at No. 5 Thompson-street, and Agnes Neay, of No. 221 Church-street, met in Broadway, directly in front of Thompson's saloon, when a dispute arose, ending in a set fight. Agnes rejoicing in more science, and having somewhat the advantage of weight, proved more than a match for her antagonist, who measured her length upon the sidewalk. Adelia soon regained her feet and endeavored to deal a blow at Agnes, in which failing, she drew a knife and stabbed her in the lip and on the head several times. Agnes was conveyed to her residence, and Adelia in the confusion succeeded in escaping for the time. She was however yesterday arrested by officer Lord, and held to bail by Justice WELSH in the sum of $500.

Coroners' Investigations.

FATAL FALL.

Coroner HILTON held an inquest on Sunday, at the New-York Hospital, on the body of a German named CHARLES ALBRECHT, aged 21 years, who died from the effects of a fall from the third story of a building now erecting on the corner of Fourth-avenue and Twenty-third-street, for the medical college. It appeared that he had fractured his skull, and fractured his skull, besides receiving other injuries. Deceased was a carpenter, at work in the building. It being understood that such cases were not received at the Bellevue Hospital, he was taken to the New-York Hospital. Doubtless the fatigue consequent upon being carried so long a distance enhanced the dangerous effect of the wound. The jury returned a verdict of "Death by fracture of the skull from an accidental fall." They say further: "We respectfully recommend a repeal of the rule at Bellevue Hospital which declares that they will not admit patients suffering from incurable diseases, believing that it may be productive of good results."

THE LATE ACCIDENT AT THE NEW-YORK HOTEL.

An inquest was held yesterday by Coroner HILTON on the body of JAMES DOUGHERTY, who came to his sad end by falling from a scaffolding 65 feet from the ground, in front of the New-York Hotel. From the testimony taken it appears deceased was engaged in painting the front of the house in question, standing on a ladder suspended by ropes. The ropes were attached to hooks. JOHN LANE and deceased were standing on this ladder, when another workman, one JOHN BARRET, stepped from out the window on the ladder on the side nearest the house, which threw the suspended ladder outward, and, as it swung back, the side was thrown up over the window-sill, precipitating deceased and his fellow-workman to the ground. BARRET saved himself by clinging to the ropes which had held the ladder. The ladder was rigged by a Mr. McCORMICK and LANE (one of the injured parties) in the usual way. Deceased fell to the sidewalk, striking directly on his head. LANE fell flat on his back. Dr. CHANE made the post mortem examination, which is immaterial. Verdict, "Fracture of the skull." Deceased was 35 years of age, and a native of Ireland.

DROWNING.

Coroner HILTON held an inquest on the body of an Irishman named JAMES HANNAN, aged about 28, found drowned at Pier No 5 East River. Deceased boarded with TIM. MCCARTY, of Front-street, and was employed on the Oswego line of canal boats. He had been confined for ten days in the Tombs, for drunkenness, and had been missing for two days since his release. Dr. CHANTENEY, who made the post mortem examination, could discover no marks of violence on his person. Verdict, "Drowned."

SUNDAY AMUSEMENTS

An inquest was yesterday held by Coroner O'DONNELL at the house of MARTIN CUMMING, No. 9 Mulberry-street, on the body of JAMES DEWARE, a native of Ireland, aged 26 years, who came by his death under the following circumstances. Deceased, on last Sabbath, went to Staten Island with two friends, and while there got into a swing—of which two were erected close together on the ground—after swinging thus for some time, he got out and was struck by the second scamp. He was brought to the City in a state of insensibility, and died at 4½ o'clock yesterday morning. Verdict: "Death from Internal Hemorrhage, from being crushed by a scug on Staten Island. No blame attached to any one."

DROWNED BY ACCIDENT.

An inquest was held by Coroner GAMBLE upon the body of a boy named ARCHIBALD PARKER, a native of this City, aged 7 years, residing at No. 69 Jackson-street who was accidentally drowned. Deceased slipped into the river, from the dock, at the foot of Jackson-street, while he was in the act of washing his feet. Verdict: "Accidental drowning."

The Authority of the Constable.

COMMON PLEAS—GENERAL TERM.

The following opinion of Judge WOODRUFF, in re Davis, respondent vs. Hafner et als., appellants, will be read with some interest:

WOODRUFF, J.—There is nothing in the return herein, to show that there was any variance between the summons and the complaint, and no such objection was raised on the trial. Such objection is purely technical; it was waived by appearing and pleading to the merits.

The other ground of appeal is of graver importance. It is insisted that the bond of the defendant, given to secure the faithful performance of the duties of the defendant Kruger as Constable of the Second Ward, is not in conformity with the requirements of the statute, and therefore is not valid as a statute bond. And that if the bond be valid, no action can be sustained thereon unless the plaintiff first obtain judgment against the Constable himself—nor unless leave to prosecute the bond is first obtained from the Judge or Judges of the Court of Common Pleas upon motion in open Court.

Upon the revision of our statutes in 1813, the law in relation to the election of Constables in the various towns in the State generally, and the bonds they should give, and the manner in which such bonds should be filed and approved, was passed, (3 Rev. Laws, 136,) and by the same revision, "The Act to reduce several laws relating particularly to the City of New-York, into one act," was also passed.—3 Rev. Laws, 342,—the 147th section of which, provides specially for the bond to be executed by every Constable elected or appointed to the office of Constable in the City of New-York. The two acts stand together. One relating to Constables in the towns in the State generally, and the other relating to the City of New-York particularly. They are wholly different, and wholly inconsistent with each other, and cannot have effect in the same place. The general law has no application, therefore, to the City of New-York. The particular statute passed with especial reference to the City of New-York, controls the City, and effectually overcomes any reasoning founded upon the suggestion that Wards in the City are to be taken as included in the word towns in the general act.

On the revision of 1828, the general law in relation to towns was in substance repealed, and the act relating to the City of New-York was left unrepealed. (1 R. S. 345, § 21; 3 R. S., 139.) So that the two laws remained in full force, (so far as relates to such bonds,) as before.

Again, on examination of title 2, of chap. 11, part 1, of the Revised Statutes, (1 R. S. 3, p. 345,) in which § 21, of article 2 is found, it will be seen that few, if any, of its provisions are applicable as all to this City.

The "Act to reduce, &c," above referred to, being in full force, provides that the bond to be executed with surety or sureties by any Constable, shall be given to the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City for the penal sum of five hundred dollars, and be delivered to the Mayor, who shall judge of and determine the sufficiency of the sureties, and the bond, with the Clerk of the City and County. And in the case of any recovery by any person aggrieved, against any such Constable, it shall be lawful for the Judge or Judges of the Mayor's Court (now for the purpose the Court of Common Pleas) upon motion in open Court, and upon showing that such recovery had been had, and that the judgment of the time of such motion is unsatisfied, to order the bond to be put in suit; and when judgment thereon is obtained the said Court shall, upon motion in open Court, direct so much to be levied thereon as will pay the debt or damages recovered by the party aggrieved, with costs, and to be paid to such party; and the act provides for a further levy upon recovery of other judgments against such constables upon the sureties.

The bond upon which the present action was brought is framed in accordance with Section 21 of the Act relating to towns above referred to, (1 Rev. Stat. 345,) incorporating therein the further provision relating to distrees for rent in this City. (Sec. 49, 2 Rev. Sts., p. 501.) And in relation to Militia Fines. (Chap. 205, Sec 26 of Laws of 1847, Vol. 1, p. 265.)

It is a Bond to the The People of the State and not to The Mayor, &c., of this City. It is approved by a Supervisor and not by the Mayor. It is in the sum of $1,000, and not of $500. It is not, therefore, the bond required by the act relating to this City, and can, therefore, find no support as a statutory security.

Where this act, these sureties are not liable to the action until after judgment recovered against the constable, and leave to prosecute has been obtained—and that statute contemplates a recovery when had to be in the name of the Mayor, &c., of this City, for the full amount of the penalty, whereupon a levy can be made from time to time of the amounts which may successively be recovered by persons aggrieved by the act or default of the constable.

And, moreover, if this bond does not in substance conform to the statute, as clearly it does not, then, regarding it as a voluntary bond, there is no warrant for bringing an action thereon in the name of the party aggrieved. Although it has been repeatedly held that a suit may be brought on the undertaking required in the act relating to towns before referred to in the name of the party aggrieved; that is because such undertaking has the sanction of the statute itself, and operates for the benefit of the party aggrieved in any form, amounting to a substantial compliance with that statute.

It appears to us unarguable, (if it be true, as we are informed,) that bonds like the present have come into general use in the City, unless there is some statute on the subject modifying the provisions of the act relating to the City of New-York in this respect. In the multitude of special statutes in force relating to this City, we might reasonably have expected counsel who rely upon this bond, and seek to uphold this judgment, to aid us by pointing us to the statute, if any can be found, warranting the taking of such a bond, and proceeding it without first obtaining judgment against the constable, and without leave sued in the name of the plaintiff. We are constrained to say that we have not been able to find such a statute; and if we err in holding the "act to reduce, &c.," to be still applicable to constable's bonds in this City, it will be for the want of such aid, and not from the want of diligent examination, with the expectation of finding some law which has led to the adoption of this form of bond, when the bond prescribed by such act had been in use for very many years, and down to a recent period.

Our conclusion under these circumstances is, that the act in relation to the City of New-York, so far as relates to such bonds, (1 147,) is still in force, and that this judgment cannot be sustained.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL'S OFFICE.

OBSTRUCTION OF CUSTOM-HOUSE OFFICERS.

David Hannington, John Read and Thos. Collins, were arrested for obstructing the officers of the Customs in discharging a vessel at one of the wharves. The accused were held to answer for the offence.

LONG ISLAND.

Laying of a Corner-Stone.

The corner-stone of the Middle Protestant Reformed Dutch Church, corner of Harrison-street and Tompkins-place, was laid yesterday afternoon. Notwithstanding the unpropitious state of the weather, a large audience was present. The exercises commenced with singing by the choir. The pastor, Rev. N. E. SMITH, then read the following history of the Church:

The South Classis of Long Island met on the 23d of November, 1846, on the corner of Smith and Butler streets, and authorized the organization of the Middle Protestant Reformed Dutch Church. A meeting for that purpose was held in their room at the above-named place Dec. 9, 1846, Rev. Dr. BEGANNEAD presiding on the occasion. The number of members at the commencement was sixteen.

The first officers of the Church were elected on that evening, consisting of three elders and three deacons. The first stated preacher was Rev. JOHN V. N. TALMAGE, who was engaged until a permanent pastor could be procured. The first regular pastor called was Rev. P. D. OAKLEY, from the Dutch Reformed Church, Oyster Bay, who commenced his labors March, 1847. During that year the Church edifice, which the congregation has recently left, was built, Mr. OAKLEY remaining a pastor about three years. The next pastor called was Rev. JAMES R. TALMAGE, of Athens, N. Y., who commenced his ministerial labors October, 1850, and remained about two years. The next regular pastor was Rev. N. E. SMITH, of Oyster Bay, L. I., who commenced his labors February, 1853, and is now the pastor. This new enterprise was commenced in 1853, the lots purchased that year and the session room commenced, completed and dedicated March, 1855, when the congregation commenced worshipping in it, and will continue to use the same until the church edifice now being built is completed.

A prayer was then made by Rev. Dr. GURLEY, of New Utrecht, L. I. After which a collection was taken up and a considerable sum realized. Addresses were delivered by Rev. Mr. GANT, of Monmouth County, N. J., Rev. Mr. OAKEY, former pastor of the congregation, and Rev. Dr. DWIGHT. The Treasurer of the Church, Mr. MOSES WEBB, read the following contents which were to be placed in the stone: The history of the Church; list of the members of the Church; names of the Building Committee; the names of the architect and builders; Constitution of the Reformed Dutch Church; Brooklyn City Directory; a copy of the Eagle and Evening Star, published in Brooklyn, and various secular and religious newspapers published in New-York. The corner stone was then laid by Rev. Dr. DWIGHT, when the ceremonies were concluded with a benediction.

The building is to be of brick, with brown stone trimmings, in the Norman style of architecture, with two towers in front, the principal one to be 180 feet high. The dimensions will be 79 feet front on Harrison-street, and extend 96 feet on Tompkins-place, the audience room to have a clear space of 64 feet in width. It is to be provided with galleries, and it is estimated that the building will seat about 1,500 persons. The cost will be $32,000. The lecture-room adjoining the building is fronted with blue marble, and the new building is to be painted in imitation. The Church now numbers 264 communicants.

Church Dedication at Greenport.

The Baptist Church at Greenport has been very much enlarged and beautified. On Sunday last it was dedicated with appropriate services. Rev. Dr. GILLETTE, of New-York, preached in the morning, Rev. Mr. WHITAKER, pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Greenport in the afternoon, and Rev. Dr. LATHROP, of the Second-avenue Baptist Tabernacle, in the evening. The house was well filled throughout the day and the exercises were very interesting. The music was appropriate and creditable. There is promise of high usefulness for this Church under the ministrations of its wide awake pastor, Elder KNAPP.

Burglary.

The grocery-store of Messrs. BOYCE & MARSH, corner of South Second and Sixth streets, was feloniously entered on Sunday night, and robbed of about $5 in money.

Brooklyn Public Schools.

On Friday last, Mr. BULKLY and the members of the Board of Education, (Eastern District,) visited the Thirteenth Ward School, No. 16, (Old No. 1,) First Ward, Williamsburg.

The Boys' Grammar School, under the care of THOMAS WEEKS, Principal, LEONARD DUNKLEY, Vice Principal, and Misses LIZZIE DUNHAM, A. M. BARNS and Mrs. JULIA M. PRICE, Assistants, with a register of 265, was first called on. The school building stands at the corner of South Third and Fifth streets. The lot is 50x125. The structure is 32x80, two stories and basement, which is used for the Primary School. The boys' and girls' departments will each seat 150. The Primary will seat 300, or a total of 600 in all. The furniture is bad enough, and the class-rooms much too small. The present property should be disposed of and a more central and commodious site secured. A first-class building erected, too, as the Thirteenth Ward contains a most influential and wealthy population, most of whom are in the habit of sending their children to the Public School.

Addresses were made after the examinations by Wm. MONAGAN, Esq., Mr. ANTHONY, Mr. FIELD and others. Mr. MONAGAN stated that he was a resident of Williamsburg before the School was even talked of. The School was opened Monday, Jan. 6, 1846,—yet it was the earliest started in Brooklyn. The various speakers commended the appearance of the pupils, and the classes were pronounced to be in a satisfactory condition. Mr. DUNKLEY is an excellent teacher, and has been appointed Vice-Principal in one of the new Grammar schools, in Third-ward. The place has not been filled.

The Boys' Grammar School, under the care of Messrs. C. F. TRUMAN, J. S. SMITH and W. R. CALDWELL, with an entire corps of assistants, is in a very orderly condition, and promising to thoroughness. The girls' Grammar School, under the care of Miss CATHARINE E. KEYS, Principal, assisted by Misses LUCIA A. HARD, M. H. ARNOLD, H. ALLEN, VIRGINIA DOUTHWAITE and M. E. BIXBY; has a register of 242 with an average attendance of 197; a fair house there and an excellent city teacher.

The Primary School, Miss S. C. SPRAGUE, Principal, Misses C. DAVIS, E. H. BICKAR, E. NICHOLSON, E. DUTCHERS and ANNA COOK, Assistants, has a register of 400, with an average attendance of 300. The School is in a basement, and has inferior furniture. It is well organized, with very thorough and devoted teachers.

Our next visit was made to the new Intermediate and Primary School No. 20, on South Fourth, Fifth, Seventh and Eighth streets. The School building stands on a lot 100 by 100 feet, and is 60 by 80 feet, with accommodations for about 600 pupils. The class-rooms are formed by sliding partitions, and are very pleasant. The furniture is of the modern style. There are various defects in the original plan of the building that will be fitted in the School fitted up. No. 20 is under the care of Mrs. C. DEALY, Principal; Misses F. J. ATKINSON, KATE BAILEY, ANNA HYDE, M. H. HOWESS, A. E. MICHABLE, A. ALLEN and E. L. HOLMES, a select corps of teachers, some of whom have been known elsewhere. The School is very pleasant and desirable, and in well cared for by the Official Board of No. 16.

We next called at Branch Primary No. 2, attached to No. 17, in North First, between Third and Fourth streets. It stands on the lot first set apart in the town of Williamsburg for school purposes, more than forty years since. The present building was erected in 1852, by Mr. POLLY, and when purchased by the Board in connection in 1854. There is a register of 173 under the care of Miss EMILY C. TILLEY, Principal, Misses SARAH TAYLOR and MARY VIRE, Assistants. The appearance of the school was very fair. There are four class-rooms well arranged. Our next call was at Branch Primary No. 4, also attached to Public School No. 17, on Ninth-street; we found a register of 100 under the care of Mrs. SUSAN BROWNE, Principal, assisted by Misses ELLEN TILNEY, MARY A. FAULKNER and CHARLOTTE BIXBY. This is a good school, well organized.

Our last call was made at the fine Colored School No. 2, on Tenth-street, near Almsby, in the Seventeenth Ward.

The Boys' Grammar School has a register of 56 pupils, under the care of Mr. SAMUEL S. RANDOLPH, a very faithful and well qualified teacher, formerly attached to one of our New-York colored schools. The Girls' Grammar School has also a register of 56 pupils under the care of Mrs. M. S. J. TOMPKINS. The school building is new and well furnished.

The Federal Judiciary.

The alleged departure of the Federal Government from all principles of right, equity, law and sense, has received double confirmation in the course of a week past. The extraordinary decision of Judge KANE, in the WERTZLER case, is a fair type of what may be expected of the Federal Judiciary, wherever a conflict of rights between the North and South is submitted to legal decision. The removal of Col. REEDER from the Governorship of Kansas and the substitution of Mr. DAWSON, adds to the manifold evidences of the hopeless corruption of the Executive. Together with the previous action of the legislative branch in the passage of obnoxious territorial bills, it displays how entirely the North is stripped of representation in the federal scheme—and shows how futile is any appeal from one department to the other, until a thorough revolution in the character of all three shall have been accomplished. The entire energies of the Government are centrifugal—instead of consolidating they tend to the proximate dissolution of the union of States—they employ every conceivable agent to relax the few natural affinities still existing between those members, which, like South Carolina and Massachusetts, are on the outer limit of the centrifugal whirl, and ready to fly off upon any considerable addition to the repulsive force. In choosing a more liberal House of Representatives the reaction has a courageous beginning, but one of minor value until those fastnesses, the Senate and Judiciary, shall have been stormed and carried, and liberalized.

We do not, we are quite sure, overrate the value of Judge KANE's dictum, as an indication of what the tendencies of the Judiciary, upon the general subject of Slavery, are likely to be. Judge KANE was selected for his post of District Judge, because he was a friend of President POLK, because he elicited from that gentleman, while a candidate, the famous "KANE Letter," because he was, and he is, an able lawyer, and because he was and he is, an unscrupulous servant of the Democratic party;—his opinions are therefore important. In the administration of Federal injustice in Pennsylvania, he and Judge GRIER, of the Circuit, have been found fraternally of one mind. They have never attempted to trim boat, or compete with each other for notoriety in merits of different species. Mr. GRIER has only had the best of it because his opportunities, as in the Christiana and Wilkesbarre cases, have been more striking and effective. The two together have contrived to give the laws of the United States that validity, that no legislation, no public opinion or sentiment, or act in Pennsylvania, can for a moment withstand. Pennsylvanians, citizens of a Free State themselves, they have invited the no longer peculiar institution of the South to overrun the free soil of their own State, as it has already appropriated the free soil of Territories. Can we expect those of the National Judiciary, born and educated among Pro-Slavery influences, and with all that unconscious prejudice in favor of the system, which may so easily pervert their judgments in cases where the issue arises, without at all implicating their honesty or sincerity,—can we expect of them a more favorable discussion of the subject, than we obtain among our own delegates to the bench? We believe, of course, no other person but Judge KANE could so far forget the dignity of his position as to anticipate questions not before him, in order to evince his devotion to the cause of Slavery. No other Justice, from a country equine in Texas, up to Chief Justice TANEY, would dare to go beyond the rule that the Federal Government has no other powers than are specifically derived from the constituent States, by deciding that in the absence of legislation on any given subject in a free State, the laws of any Southern member of the Union attach. So, in announcing the absence of a prohibitory act in Pennsylvania as a reason why slaves can be introduced, and followed and protected by North Carolina laws, Mr. KANE has decided; and daring so to decide, he has declared that North Carolina laws for the maintenance of Slavery are a part of the Federal code, and that he as a Federal officer has a right to administer them as such any where in the Union. If the Judiciary contributed from the north side of Mason and Dixon so determine, what may we expect of contributions from the South?

It is in vain to say that the very transparent folly of Judge KANE's opinion makes it innocuous. There never was a time when so much depended upon the popular faith in the Federal Judiciary. To that final tribunal several questions, upon which the sentiment of the Union is divided, must be carried. Could it be kept clear from all suspicion of bias; could it be believed that when cases arising under the Fugitive Law, for instance, are taken hither, they will be treated in the calm light of truth, rather than in the unhealthy glare of private or personal or political prejudices, or pro-commitment, then we should have the talismanic antidote for agitation about us, and look cheerfully at the future. But this confidence is utterly destroyed by such instances of judicial effrontery as Judge KANE has afforded us. The fate of any question relating to the great issue and exposed to the judgment of a bench so constituted, is as well ascertained before as after the authoritative announcement of opinion. We are obliged to object to the Court, as we are to a Juryman who discloses his views beforehand. The only appeal from the partisan feeling and corruption of Legislature and Executive is taken away, and the extremist finds no redress for what he deems intolerable wrongs, but in dissolution, more or less speedy. To this miserable result has Judge KANE pointed us. To this fearful alternative he has left us.

So long as the officers of the judicial establishment are the creatures of the Executive, we may expect to find individuals among them guilty of opinions as extravagant as the present. The time has come to reform the system. It deserves consideration whether the District Judges, if not the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, should not be made elective by a direct popular vote, and for a specified term. The introduction of a popular element in some way, at some point, is the great desideratum; it is needed to effect a more industrious dispatch of business; it is needed to obtain more legal and rational decisions. The subject is an important one, and may justify an amendment to the Constitution and corresponding legislation.

Canadian Know-Nothings.

Late Canadian papers seem to indicate that a new political party, whose principles closely resemble those of our own Know-Nothings, is being organized and will soon make its influence felt in the Government of the Province. Though within the last twenty years Canada has received from the mother country greater concessions than any other colony has ever obtained before, yet there are many circumstances which would justify a native Canadian movement, and enlist for it the sympathies of the people of the United States. The present standard of a Canadian politician is anything but an exalted one, for the glaring corruptions of the late, as well as of the present Ministry, have brought the profession into marked disrepute. More than this, though the majority of the population is Protestant, the Government, or rather the Ministry, is altogether Roman Catholic in its leanings, in order to pacify and buy up the clergy and members of that church. So completely is the ministry under the control of the Romish priesthood, that measures are continually passed for the advantage and advancement of that politico-religious organization, to the great injury of the Protestant population. It is also asserted that the Governor General gives away the most lucrative appointments to strangers, or as the Canadians begin to call them, foreigners from the Old Country. To remedy these and similar evils is the object of the new party. They are, undoubtedly, grievances which those born on the soil are right in resenting. The reward of office given to deserving citizens, should come from the people, and the people only. We trust that the time is not far distant when all Canadian officers will be elected—from Governor down to County Clerk.

The great misfortune with our Canadian neighbors is, their lack of a free and unbought press, which can afford to speak out the honest wishes of the people. Nearly all the papers, at least of the Lower Province, where there is the strongest feeling of opposition to the foreign influence, are subsidized by the Government, and cannot, or at least imagine they cannot, afford to go into opposition, the first consequences of which would be the loss of Government advertising. The Quebec Gazette, however, appears to be a paper of a different class, and, judging from the tone of a letter in a recent number, addressed to the Governor General, it is not at all afraid of manifesting its hostility to the Government. There is a Young Canada party, we are told, which includes in its ranks much of the best intellect of the Lower Province, whose members are ambitious of political distinction, or at least of taking a leading part in the affairs of the country of which they are natives, and who, naturally enough, are growing restless while all the offices of distinction and profit are monopolized, either by foreigners or the Catholics.

An Irish Deliverer.

The Citizen has published an address to the Irish in America, written, as the editor of that paper states, by some terrible Celt in this country, whose name, if it were divulged, would "make the tyrants beyond the Atlantic gnash their teeth with rage, or tremble with apprehension of the doom they deserve." Who this Irish deliverer may be we cannot conceive, but a man whose very name has such potency ought not to be hid under an alias. Ireland is not now in so great need of a deliverer as she has been:—the potato, according to the last advices, was never more promising; the recruiting sergeant snaps up every idle Irishman who is willing to serve the Queen and earn a medal in the Crimea by the loss of a limb; emigration has fallen off to nearly one-half what it was in the year of famine, and we see not the least indication of a rebellious spirit in the Irish journals that reach us. The present time, we should say, is by no means favorable to an invasion of Ireland by an army of liberators from this country. We have no doubt that the new Irish deliverer, who addresses his country through the columns of the Citizen, is a fearful person, but we doubt very much whether "the tyrants beyond the Atlantic" would tremble with apprehension at the mere mention of his name. The tyrants of Europe are a very hard-hearted and thick-headed set, take them as they run, and they have too much faith in the bayonets at their command, and the docility of their subjects, to fear any names whatever. There must be now a very considerable sum remaining on hand of the moneys raised in this City and put at the disposal of the Irish Directory, which will be used one of these days, very likely, in equipping an invading army for the deliverance of Ireland. But for the present the treasury of the Directory is probably increasing the capital of the sacred fund by profitable investments, which in time will swell to a sum nearly large enough to purchase Ireland out and out. It can hardly be possible, we should imagine, that either Col. WALKER or Col. KINNEY can be the person to whom the Citizen alludes in so mysterious and exciting a manner.

Non-Taxation of Incorporated Companies.

An article appeared in a morning paper, a few days since, referring to an application by one of the City Banks to the Board of Supervisors for a remission of its taxes, on the ground of having made no money during the current year. The application was laughed at as a rather cool joke for warm weather by some of our cotemporaries, who were not aware that there is a law for the remission and commutation of taxes under the provisions of title 4, chap. 13, part 1, of the Revised Statutes, as amended, July 21, 1853, justifying such a procedure.

The act of July, 1853, provides, "That moneyed or stock corporations, authorized to make dividends on their capital, and not in the receipt during the preceding year of net profits, or clear income, equal to five per cent. on such capital, after deducting the assessed value of their real estate, shall be allowed to commute, by paying dividends directly to the Treasurer of the county, a sum equal to five per cent. on their actual net profits or clear income"

To entitle corporations, however, to this privilege of commutation, the necessary proof must be submitted to the satisfaction of the Board of Supervisors.

It appears, further, that the Committee on Annual Taxes, JOHN KELLY and HENRY HOFFMAN, made a report to the Board of Supervisors, July 13, 1855, growing out of applications under the law for relief, in which they state as follows:

"Since the operation of this law would virtually exempt a large amount of corporation capital hitherto subject to taxation, your Committee concluded to consult with R. J. DILLON, Corporation Counsel, and submit the affidavits for his examination and report. The affidavits attached have been returned by the Corporation Counsel as justifying the remission of the tax, or the commutation thereof. In all cases in which any net profit, or clear income, has been received, that amount is made subject to commutation, but where no profits or income has been received, the assessment must be stricken from the assessment rolls."

Under this decision of the Corporation Counsel, the Committee submitted two resolutions—the first, allowing the following Incorporations to commute by paying five per cent. on their net annual profits or clear income during the preceding year, viz.: The Sun Mutual Insurance Company on $30,000; the Atlantic Bank on $16,564; the New-York India Rubber Company on $1,000; and the New-York Balance Dock on $5,000.

The other resolution—that the following Incorporations be struck from the assessment rolls, not having been in receipt during the preceding year of any net profits or clear income whatever—viz.: The Union, New-York Commercial, Astor and Mercantile Insurance Companies; the Hamilton, St. Mark's and People's Fire Insurance Companies; the United States Mail Steamship Company; the Third and Sixth-avenue Railroads; the South-street, Dry Dock, Grand, Bowery and South Ferry Stage Companies; the Blank Book Ruling and Paging Company; the Gas Regulator Company, Knickerbocker Life Insurance Company, Knickerbocker Ice Company, East River Bank and St. Nicholas Insurance Company.

It is understood that a large number of Manufacturing Incorporations in the interior of the State have been compelled, from the disasters of the past year, to obtain relief under the law.

It is probable that very few persons are aware of the existence of this law, which should be called "An act for the promotion of improvidence and the reward of carelessness in managing other people's business." The law may be a just one on abstract principles, but if it is just to Incorporations it is most unjust to individuals, and it should either be repealed or made universal in its application, like the Income Tax of England. The merchant who does an extensive business on a capital of ten or twenty thousand dollars must pay his assessments whether his business yield a profit or not, but the wealthy Corporation with a capital of a million is relieved from taxation, as a compensation for the mismanagement or misconduct of its officers.

A Damp Term.

The wet is becoming serious and alarming. Summer is passing away with a halting pace, giving us two rainy days to one dry one. Sunshine is a rarity even in July. Reports of disastrous consequences to the Wheat crop and the grass in the Western Counties of the State, occasioned by the almost incessant rains of July, are dimming in no small degree the brilliant and glowing accounts of the harvest from other quarters. The watering places feel the ill effects of this watery term, and the hilarity which belongs to the season is drowned in our too copious showers. Parties of pleasure are prevented, pic-nics are destroyed, moonlight excursions are indefinitely postponed, and the Railroads and steamboats miss the Summer travel which they had counted upon for their dividends. Our domestic arrangements are disordered, and the whole economy of society is thrown into confusion by these unwonted and unlooked-for floods. Everything is damp and sticky; there is an unwholesome and musty atmosphere within doors, and in the open air exercise is out of the question. Doors and windows are so swollen by the moisture that they can neither be opened nor shut. The weather was bright and pleasant on Sunday, but it rained again nearly the whole of yesterday. There may have been similar rains in July, but not within our recollection, nor that of the oldest person of our acquaintance, has there ever been so wet a July as the month which comes to its watery end this day.

Death in the Pot.

There were 669 deaths in this City last week—an unusually small number for the season; but, out of these cases, according to the official classification, 319 were occasioned by disorders of the stomach—a fact which shows that with all our intelligence and knowledge of the laws of life, a fearful number of our population are grossly ignorant of living, and nearly destitute of that instinct which enables the lower order of animals to reject all kinds of food not adapted to their bodily constitutions. The first instinct of a new born child is to put the first thing that comes within its reach into its mouth, and this instinctive disposition remains with the matured man, who, though he may be learned in law, in science, and theology, and languages, and able to prescribe the most nutritive and healthful food for all other animals, knows so little of what is good for his own digestive organs that he will eat and drink all manner of substances that are not only ruinous to his happiness, but fatal in their effects upon the bodily system. It is perfectly marvelous to see with what perfect indifference sensible men will sit down at a dinner table, and fill themselves to repletion with dishes, of the component parts of which they are totally ignorant, and drink mixtures the least ill effect of which will be a certain giddiness of the brain and a confusion of the memory. Men who would not be guilty of the imprudence of employing a lawyer, or a physician, or listen to a preacher, who had not been properly educated and duly licensed by competent examiners to practice his profession, will unhesitatingly employ an ignorant cook of whom they know nothing, and eat and drink whatever he or she may choose to serve up to them. We pay too much attention to the head and too little to the stomach. If this were not so, we should not read in the weekly report of the mortality of the City, that nearly one-half the deaths were caused by the diseases of that important part of our animal system.

Removal of Governor Reeder.

The Administration are determined that Governor REEDER shall not receive any of the honors or advantages of martyrdom, and therefore his removal is alleged to have been made on account of his land speculations, and not as a concession to General SHIELDS, FELLOW and his Missouri bullies. But, in thus attempting to degrade Governor REEDER and deprive him of his honors as a martyr, the Administration deprive themselves of all the credit and éclat which his removal would gain them at the South if it had been made on political grounds. The President has made a double mistake in alleging any reason for the removal of the Governor. He should have left the act to be interpreted according to the wishes of his partisans; at the South it would have been hailed as a magnanimous sacrifice to the exactions of the Slave-holding interest, while his friends at the North might have attributed it to a stern sense of honor, which rebuked an official for an improper speculation in the public lands. As the case now stands, though the South is the favored party, and the new Governor will be most acceptable to them, yet they are under no necessity of acknowledging the act as done especially out of regard to their wishes, while the North will distrust the alleged motive for the removal. If Governor REEDER had rendered himself acceptable to General SHIELDS, FELLOW, and remained quiet under the invasion of the Missourians, we do not believe he would have been removed, if his speculations had been twice as extensive as they were. His successor is a Pennsylvanian, like himself, and though he voted for the Nebraska bill in Congress, we cannot believe that he will show any greater leniency to the Missourian invaders than did the deposed Governor.

☞ We have received a communication from a correspondent, who indignantly asks why the people's money should be expended for so anti-Democratic a purpose as that of erecting statues and "stone pillows" "to the memory of Generals!" We have an opinion ourselves that the people's money might, possibly, be put to a better use,—in teaching the people, for instance, the useful art of spelling.

Dramatic.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—There was a bumping house last evening, a long way ahead of any similar demonstration this year. The beneficiare, Mr. T. D. RICE, may well feel gratified at such an unequivocal testimonial of remembrance. The performances were of a lengthy description, and could not by any possibility terminate before midnight. Mr. RICE appeared in the last piece. The length of the programme, and the impossibility of obtaining even standing room, prevented our waiting to see his reception. It was, of course, enthusiastic.

BENEFIT.—The efficient and polite door-keepers of the Broadway Theatre take their annual benefit to-night. The programme is excellent, and will, we hope, attract a good audience.

The Broadway Theatre will close for the season with this evening's performance.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—The French Company give a vaudeville performance to-night. Three pieces will be performed, introducing all the artists of the establishment.

Irish Aid Society.

The members of the Irish Aid Society held a regular meeting at their rooms, No. 125 Grand-street, last evening. The President, Mr. JAMES MULLIGAN, presided. After the transaction of the usual opening business, the Executive Committee submitted a report of their doings, and announced that three more families would be sent out by them to the West this week, where they have friends. The Treasurer announced the receipt of several liberal donations to the Society, and after the election of new members, the reference of applicants for aid, and the passage of a vote of thanks to the press for its support, the meeting adjourned.

FROM WASHINGTON.

New-York Politics—Public Lands Sold—South Carolina's Doughty Governor.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, July 28, 1855.

H. B. STANTON, Esq., GEORGE N. SAUNDERS, and a Select Committee of Softs, Hards and Silver-Gray Know-Nothings, are paying their respects at the White House, with reference, doubtless, to the Fall campaign in New-York. GEORGE is now in the interest of GEORGE LAW, having formally cut HUNTER, once his favorite, and turned the cold shoulder to DOUGLAS, who, while nominally true to SAUNDERS' interest, has gradually withdrawn from his client, as too fast and inconvenient. STANTON, you know, is a reformed Free-Soiler, who has passed through quarantine, and is now received as a passable National Democrat. SAUNDERS is as bitterly Hard-Shell and Anti-Soft as ever before, but political exigencies have thrown him in, higgledy-piggledy, with all sorts of people, and he does not except from the melange even such renegade Abolitionists as STANTON and J. L. O'SULLIVAN. The necessity of a fusion of all the shreds and patches of Democracy is equally obvious to and is equally desired by all the "National", Know-Nothings and all the Administration men. Still to arrange the terms of such a union, though that between the Softs and Hards propet has fallen through, I suppose to be the object of this deputation. The proposed and expected Whig and Free-Soil Fusion in New-York has carried disunion to the souls of the "Nationalists" everywhere. Those intensely patriotic gentlemen have reposed in perfect security upon the conviction that there could be no coöperation between the so-called Conservative Anti-Nebraska Whigs of New-York and the friends of Gov. SEWARD. The fusion game will be played out by both parties, but it is one at which the spurious National Democracy cannot win. Fortunately, considering the treacherous and incendiary course which that organization has pursued under the dictation of DOUGLAS, PIERCE and ATCHISON, it cannot repudiate the alliance with its foreign supporters, and consequently cannot conciliate the Know-Nothings, whether debauched by the platform of the Philadelphia Convention, or occupying a more honest and independent position. There can be no union, then, between these parties, and without that combination any Democratic fusion in New-York must be impotent.

The calculation is, that fully two-thirds of the Democratic vote of your State adhering to the administration consist of foreign recruits, and a reasonable prospect of successful opposition would draw off one-half of the other third. Gen. PIERCE is at this time specially anxious about New-York, for on a party success in that State this Fall depends his almost only chance for a re-nomination. Owing to the large Custom-house and Post-office patronage there, he has some strength within the party, and by the perfection of its machinery and discipline, he expects to retain it, and to control the vote of the State in the National Convention.

The exposition of public lands sold within the past fiscal year presents some surprising results, and yet such as are characteristic of the working of our Government. The following recapitulation of the table embraces the most important items:

	Acres.
Total quantity of lands for cash	14,560,269
Total quantity sold in the Free States and Territories	7,021,266
Total quantity sold in the Slave States and Territories	7,267,000
Total amount of cash receipts	$10,549,000 00
Received from sales in Free States	7,615,000 00
Received from sales in Slave States	2,934,000 00
Average price per acre for all the States	71
Average price per acre for Free States	108.9
Average price per acre for Slave States	36

The greatest quantity of land sold in any State, and at the highest price, was in Iowa, where 2,276,000 acres were sold at $1 24 per acre. The next greatest quantity was disposed of in Missouri, where 2,896,000 acres were sold at an average of 42 cents per acre. The lowest average price was in Indiana, where the small remnants of a half century's traffic in Government real estate brought only 17.7 cents per acre. The next lowest average was in Alabama, where nearly 2,300,000 acres sold for a trifle over half a million of dollars, equal to 23 cents per acre.

These facts are additional proofs of a truth sufficiently well established before, namely, that while the benefits and favors of the General Government fall chiefly upon the South, the chief burdens of its support devolve upon the North. We pay enormous prices for the regions we annex at the South, as in Texas and the Mesilla Valley, from which not a farthing will be realized; we lavish the public treasure in original payments to Southern Indians for their land titles, and generally double or treble the amount in the allowance of fraudulent claims growing out of them; the expenses of surveys at the South are double those at the North—and the grand result of the whole is that lands at the North acquired at half price yield to the national treasury three times as much as those at the South. In other words, while acquisitions on the free side of the line of division are a source of revenue and national strength, Southern accessions serve no other purpose but to absorb the revenues derived from the contributions of the opposite section.

The Governor of South Carolina has been ventilating the chivalry of his character by refusing to lay before the State Legislature the resolutions of the Massachusetts Legislature. The puerile insolence of the proceeding on his part deprives the intended insult of its sting, and Massachusetts will probably disdain to retort by recalling, as she may do, any incident in the history of South Carolina. But this suspension of the ordinary courtesies of intercourse between the States is evidently a part of a system suggested by the Richmond Enquirer and advocated by the Washington Union—two journals supported by subsidies from the federal treasury—for expelling Massachusetts from the Union. The American Organ, too, a Know-Nothing establishment temporarily located here, and living on the expectation of treasury pap, in the shape of Congressional printing, adopts the idea, and anxiously inquires when the process of excluding Massachusetts is to begin. It is to become, says the Organ, a serious question how long she is to be permitted to remain in the Union after repudiating the Fugitive Law, and the next question will be, who shall put her out? How delightful the coolness and naiveté of these casuists. AQUIRAY.

Small Loaves.

Anchors have been the emblems of stability heretofore, but anchors drag and dishonor their reputation. Henceforth let the small bread loaf be the accepted emblem, for it never changes except to become more so. When rumors of the war of the Titans over the water began to be borne to our ears, the bakers were the first to hear them, and instantly the bread-loaves shrank. Ever since, each new item of news and each new announcement that there is no news abroad has reproduced the effect of a new shrinkage of the loaf. The abundant supply of wheat at home has no counteracting effect. The glorious harvest just cradled has no alterative power. The loaf has reversed the story of the frog that swelled till it burst. The loaf has shrunk up so small that we doubt if ever it will again exceed the capacity of an old-fashioned biscuit. We know of but one remedy in which lies a single hope, and that is this:

Let a few families unite to hunt up the baker in their vicinity that gives the largest loaf of the best quality, and stick by him so long as he gives the largest. When the old bakers begin to lose their customers, they may possibly see on which side their interest lies, and take some speedy means to relieve their little loaves from their diminishing size. But if that fails, we must buy our own flour and bake our own bread, and if our wives are worth a shilling, they will make such bread as the finest upon the alum-cursed batches of the bakers never dreamed could come under their condemnation name. Bakers' bread, in an season as it is usually compared with the bread that our wives would bake.

A Perilous Adventure.

On Saturday afternoon last, as Mr. JAMES BOGLE, the distinguished artist of this City, and his son,—a boy of about 12 years of age, in company with Mr. TALMAN, a young lawyer, also of this City, and a young South American gentleman whose name we did not learn, were about returning from a fishing excursion on Long Island Sound, off Port Morris, the boat was suddenly capsized while at anchor, throwing the whole party into the water. Mr. BOGLE being the only one of the party who could swim, immediately on reaching the surface of the water, caught hold of his boy by the hair and drew him to the boat which was bottom up. The other gentlemen being startled at their cold plunge, caught hold of the keel of the boat in such a manner as to cause it to roll over again, and all were thrown into the water again. Mr. BOGLE with much difficulty succeeded in placing his son on the keel of the boat, while the other gentlemen hung on either side to sustain its balance. While in this precarious position the boy observing that his father was much exhausted, and over anxious on his account, exclaimed, "Never mind me, save yourself for mother's sake." This heroic speech encouraged all hands to remain perfectly calm until their situation was observed, and an old gentleman, Mr. WEEKS, who, being in a boat about half a mile off near the Westchester shore, came to their relief. He succeeded in saving all of the party. The accident occurred near a small island known as Anna's Island, near the middle of the Sound, and would doubtless have proved fatal had not the boat hung by her anchor and the party maintained a very remarkable degree of self-possession.

Kansas.

A weekly journal, to be called the Council City Banner, will be commenced about the 1st of September next, at Council City, Kansas Territory, by P. O. CONVER & Co. Its prospectus says, "The Banner will be the organ of no clique or faction either in politics or religion," and its programme adds:

"While we may not deem it best to stir up and create unnecessary discord among ourselves in regard to our civil institutions, we shall yet take a firm, decided and uncompromising stand in opposition to Slavery in Kansas, when the time comes for the adoption of a State Constitution, or if we are forced into a discussion of the question by surrounding circumstances. From the true friends of Freedom everywhere, we ask, and have a right to expect a liberal patronage."

The terms of subscription are $2 in advance for single copies. GEORGE WALKER, Secretary of the Kansas League, No. 110 Broadway, is agent for the paper in this City.

Council City is the first town founded by the American Settlement Company, of New-York. It is situated on the Santa Fé road, and has now about 1,500 inhabitants.

Pay Your Help.

The laborer is worthy of his hire. If those who hire would remember it, great would be the advantage to the hired and great the gain to justice. But very frequently the employer forgets; he thinks it is of no consequence—the hired can wait if they want it, or it is not convenient to pay just when it is due. This is all wrong. The employed have their engagements to meet as well as employers. They have a credit to sustain, and probably enjoy the feeling, as do others, that money is quite as safe in their own hands, or deposited according to their will, as if held by a clash and very busy creditor. They generally, too, dislike to have to dun their employers for money, and if sensitive will suffer loss in demanding it. Be just, and pay promptly. Squaring matters at once is a good practice for all parties, and has no disadvantages in it.

PATERSON CLUB VS. NEWARK CLUB.

The return match between these two clubs came off yesterday, at Paterson, N. J. Newark was victorious by three wickets. The game was closely contested with small scores on all sides. HALLAS batted beautifully, especially in the second innings. Newark missed HUGHES and J. ELVERSON, Paterson were also short these men—BUCHANAN was a loser by them—his play and judgment would materially have assisted them. The play was not as good as it should have been; therefore, we shall leave the worst to tell the tale:

SPECIAL NOTICES.

☞ Dr. Agrimont's Tropical Remedy is a certain cure for Cholera Infantum, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery and Diarrhœa. No traveler should be without it, as it can be carried in the pocket-book, and taken in a little cold water when required with safety, and immediate relief, by the morning infant or adult. For sale by druggists.

Wholesale Agents—HAVILAND, HABRAL & RILEY, No. 93 Warren-st.; MCKESSON & ROBBINS, No. 127 Maiden-lane. WM. B. DODGE & CO., Proprietors, No. 42 Beekman-st.

☞ Death of 500 Children.—Last week proved most fatal to children, and, as usual, bowel complaints to some form were the cause. If parents would procure and use in time Dr. MCLINTOCKE'S DIARRHŒA CORDIAL, they would save the lives of their children in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred. In fact, with this wonderful specific, we do not hesitate to guarantee a rapid cure in all cases where used promptly. Price 25 and 50 cents. Sold by A. CUSHMAN & CO., No. 298 Broadway, and by all druggists.

☞ Hoofland's Russian Salve—25 Cts. a Box.—A known remedy of 20 years' standing—a sure and speedy cure for Bruises, Burns, Scalds, and all external injuries; recommended by physicians. Sold by all druggists in the United States. A. B. & D. SANDS, C. V. CLICKENER & CO., C. H. RING, New-York; WM. S. SIMMONS, JOHN GILLIGAN & CO., Philadelphia, and REDDING & CO., Proprietors, Boston.

☞ Bloom of Thousand Flowers—For beautifying the complexion and eradicating all tan, pimples or freckles from the face. PETRIDGE & CO., Franklin-square, New-York; for sale by C. H. RING, Broadway, and all druggists.

☞ Anti-Slavery Excursion and Pic-Nic.—The NEW-YORK ANTI-SLAVERY SOCIETY invites the friends of Liberty in the City and vicinity to unite in celebrating the Twenty-fourth Anniversary of WEST INDIA EMANCIPATION, by an excursion to Morris' Grove, near Jamaica, on WEDNESDAY, Aug. 1. WM. LLOYD GARRISON and Rev. ERASTUS D. GULVER are engaged to deliver addresses. Ministers from Williams and other have also been invited. Music by the Wallace Band. Refreshments will be furnished by individuals or families for themselves. The company will leave Brooklyn in a special train of cars (including baggage car for refreshments) at 10 A. M., and return in the evening. Leave the Grove at 6 P. M. Those intending to unite in the celebration are earnestly requested to procure tickets on or before Monday, in order that the Railroad Company may be seasonably informed as to the extent of the accommodations required. Tickets for the excursion, including all privileges, will be prepared and left at the Anti-Slavery Office, No. 121 Nassau-st., or at FOWLERS & WELLS, No. 308 Broadway. If Wednesday proves rainy, the celebration will be postponed to the next fair day.

☞ Wilson's Patent Wash-Tub.—This is a convenient Wash-tub, without a rub board, a simple contrivance for rubbing the clothes. It will not injure the finest fabric, and will save at least three fourths of the time and labor usually employed in washing. It is the only machine which can be with the means of every family. Its price is so low that it is within the reach of every family. Specimens exhibited, and orders received at No. 207 Broadway. I. A. HEAD, Agent.

P. S.—Please call and examine.

☞ Fancy Goods for Druggists' Sales.—Tooth, hair and nail brushes, combs, Lubin's extracts, Low's Bowers Whisker wax, Farina cologne, and every article adapted to Druggists' sales, for sale by RUFUS K. MCHARG, & CO., Importers, No. 183 Broadway.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE SENSATION OF THE PRESS.
Now Published,
MARY LYNDON;
OR, REVELATIONS OF A LIFE.
AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY.
In One Duodecimo Volume, neatly bound in Cloth.
Price $1.

It is but four days since Mary Lyndon was published. Already a "rush" has commenced to get a copy of this striking book. Duplicate orders are pouring in by telegraph from all quarters where the book has been received, in numerous instances the supply being exhausted on the first day. A third large edition is being printed with the utmost expedition. Like all great original efforts of genius when first introduced, its merits are canvassed, pro and con, by various minds. The Times' prediction is being verified, that it would be "admired and abused more than any work published for many seasons." The philosophy of "Jane Eyre" was severely condemned, and Mrs. Stowe's "Uncle Tom" was roughly handled, and even the tone of "The Scarlet Letter" was severely denounced in some quarters; it is but the fate of the works of genius. "Mary Lyndon" has produced a profound sensation in literary circles; every one wants to know who wrote this brilliant book; who is the great unknown? The critics are united in extolling its fascinating power and originality, but they diverge widely when discussing its bold women's rights principles, which the Mirror thinks are set forth with "fearful audacity," and doubts its being the "maiden efforts of the author." The Commercial says it is as original and as profoundly interesting as Miss Bronte's "Jane Eyre," and the Savannah Journal and Courier pronounces it "an extraordinary production." And the Press from every section is coming in freighted with eulogies on this charming novel, more than fulfilling the high expectations of the early reviewers.

"Wash and be healed."

THE WATER-CURE JOURNAL.

Volume Twenty commences with the present number. We give the following brief Prospectus:

Health is our great want. We can obtain it only by the study of the Laws of Life and the Cause of Disease. To explain these fully is our aim. All subjects connected with Diet, Exercise, Cleanliness, Ventilation, Dwellings, Clothing, Occupation and Amusements, will be clearly presented. Hydropathy will be fully explained and applied to all diseases. The Water-Cure is not equaled by any other mode of treatment in those complaints peculiar only to Women, and we will give practical advice most important to them. Particular directions for the treatment of ordinary cases at home, so that all may apply it without the aid of a Physician. This JOURNAL is designed for the "People"—not the organ of any profession or sect.

Believing the Health Reform to be the basis of all reforms and that no other agency can be more efficient than this, we rely on the friends of Human Improvement to place a copy of the WATER-CURE JOURNAL in every family in the United States. The JOURNAL will be handsomely illustrated, and printed on fine paper, with cloth cover for binding, on the 1st of each month, on the following terms:

Single Copy, one year...$1 00 Ten Copies, one year....$7 00
Five Copies, one year... 4 00 Twenty Copies for..... 10 00

From the Southern Times.
Each month it gladdens us to see on our household, to say nothing of the neighbors who enjoy it with us. Twenty-five cents buy it—the cheapest, richest, and most lasting luxury for the money that we know. Three dollars secures it for one year; and what three dollars ever went so far? Put the same amount in clothes, eating, drinking, furniture, and how much of a substantial thing is obtained? If ideas, facts, and sentiment, have a monetary value; above all, if the humor that refreshes, the pleasantries that bring a gentle smile, and brighten the passage of a truth to your brain, and the happy combination of the real and the imaginative, without which no one can live a life above the animal, are to be put into the scale opposite to dollars and cents, then you may be certain, that if Harper were three or four times as dear, it would amply repay its price. It is a Magazine proper, with the ideas and purposes of a Magazine—not a scientific periodical, nor yet a supplier of light gossip and chatty anecdotes—but a Magazine that takes every form of interesting, dignified and attractive literature in its grasp.

TERMS.—The Monthly Magazine may be obtained of Postmasters, Periodical Agents, or from the Publishers, at THREE DOLLARS a year, or TWENTY-FIVE CENTS a Number. The Semi-annual Volumes, as completed, neatly bound in Cloth, are sold at Two DOLLARS each; and muslin covers are furnished to those who wish to have their numbers uniformly bound, at TWENTY-FIVE CENTS each. Ten volumes are now ready, bound.

The Publishers will supply Specimen Numbers gratuitously to Agents and Postmasters, and will make liberal arrangements with them for circulating the Magazine. They will also supply Clubs, of two persons at Five Dollars a year, or five persons at Ten Dollars. Clergymen supplied at Two Dollars a year.

From the New-York Commercial Advertiser.

"Harper's Magazine" and "Harper's Story Books" will henceforth be welcomed as joint visitors in thousands of families where there are juvenile readers to be pleased as well as adults.

From the Louisville Courier.

We have heard so many fathers and mothers who recognize the pleasant duty of guiding the minds of their children in the paths of knowledge at home, speak in terms of the highest commendation of this series of books for children, that we feel a desire to see them universally read among children. They constitute the finest series of books for the young that we have seen.

From the Vicksburg Whig.

All of Abbott's stories are preferred by children to any others, because they contain no an ration of improbable events, but such as might have happened to any little boy or girl on any day in the year. If parents would place just such books as these in the hands of their children they would find less trouble in governing them.

From the Southern Churchman.

We can not too highly commend this series of Story Books for children. Mr. Abbott possesses peculiar qualifications for such compositions; and the Christian parent may safely trust him as a guide to his little ones in the path of goodness.

From the Southern Observer.

These books have never been surpassed by anything gotten up for the profit and pleasure of the little people.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

NEW EDITIONS OF
CONE CUT CORNERS,
BY BENAVILY,
[illegible] pp. Illustrated, Cloth. Price $1 25.
From the Milwaukie Sentinel.
The writer, whoever he is, wields a ready pen. His hits at characters of various sorts are admirable.
From the Nashua (N. H.) Oasis.
It has real humor, casual pathos, and a good moral. It has been pronounced equal to Dickens' best effort.
From the St. Louis Morning News.
The writer is a shrewd judge of human nature, and a merciless painter of some of its melancholy weaknesses—though without bitterness, for he is as much a humorist as Dickens.
From Norton's Literary Gazette.
There is a naturalness about the descriptions and the portraitures, which, in these days of literary insincerity, is really refreshing.
From the New-York Express.
Admirably fitted for domestication in that stronghold and citadel of public opinion—the home circle.
From the New-York Picayune.
The writer is most successful with his New-Englanders, the deacons, politicians, &c., and all such are drawn to the life.
From the Waterville (Me.) Mail.
It is a capitally written book.
From the Athens (Pa.) Gazette.
The characters are drawn to the life, and by a masterhand.
From the Lancaster (Pa.) Examiner.
One of the best pictures of village life we ever read.
From the Bridgeport (Ct.) Farmer.
Written in a style of charming sprightliness and ease, the general tone of the work reminding one of Dickens' writings.
From the Boston Traveler.
It is the work of a master. The characters are most graphically drawn.
From the Pittsburg Gazette.
One of the very best American novels that have recently issued.
From the Columbus (Ohio) City Fact.
The style of the writer is graceful, luminous, and enchants with a magic spell that compels us ever onward.
From the New-York Dispatch.
A very natural and extremely interesting story.
From the New-York Atlas.
The book, we are sure, will make its mark, and a creditable one it will be, too, to American literature.

To any one remitting us $1 25, a copy of CONE CUT CORNERS will be sent by mail, post-paid. For sale by booksellers generally. Published by TELEGRAPH.

MAGNETIC TELEGRAPH.—MORSE LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BALTIMORE, WASHINGTON, AND INTERMEDIATE STATIONS.—Six wires and two lines of poles the entire distance, and seven wires between New-York and Philadelphia.—RATES REDUCED ANNEXED SCHEDULE. Shortest dispatch increased from ten to twenty words.

The MORSE Line of Magnetic Telegraph, from Washington to New-York, is the first Company Telegraph Line ever constructed in this Country, and believed to be the most efficient working line in the world. It has more wires and greater facilities for Telegraphing than any other in the United States. With a view to rendering it even more reliable, the limit to the shortest dispatch has been fixed at twenty words, instead of ten heretofore, thereby enabling the management of those using the Telegraph so to abridge their dispatches as often to render them unintelligible. These undue abbreviations often have led to error in the transmission of dispatches, resulting in loss to the parties interested and in discredit to the Telegraph, which is too frequently charged with the errors of careless writers and bad chirography.

MESSAGES IN A FOREIGN LANGUAGE OR IN CIPHER.

All messages written in whole or in part in a foreign language or in cipher, or composed wholly or in part of words, figures or letters intended to convey a meaning understood only by the persons who invent or agree to use them, will be charged fifty per cent above the ordinary rates.

Figures are allowed only in the address and signature of a message. All numbers in the body of a message must be written in words at full length.

REPEATED AND INSURED MESSAGES.

The public are respectfully informed, that in order to provide against mistakes in the transmission of messages by the Magnetic Telegraph Company, every Message of any sentence ought to be Repeated, by being sent back from the office at which it is to be received to the office from which it is originally sent. Double the usual price of transmission will be charged, when the message is so repeated, and a report made, by special messenger, to the party sending the same, whether it has been received by the office to which it is to be received to the office from which it is originally sent. Double the usual price of transmission will be charged, when the message is so repeated, and a report made, by special messenger, to the party sending the same, whether it has been received by the party to whom it was sent, and if not, why not! or fifty per cent in addition to the usual rates will be charged for either repeating or reporting only.

The Resolutions to Hamilton against Judge Wilkins are very much more Decorous—The Judge's Resignation Demanded by the Citizens.

From the Cincinnati Daily Times, July 27.

An adjourned meeting of the citizens of Butler County, was held at the Court House in Hamilton last evening, to hear the report of a Committee appointed on Wednesday night to investigate the truth of the rumors in reference to the conduct of THOMAS WILKINS, Probate Judge of the County.

At the ringing of the bell the citizens flocked to the Court House, soon forming a multitude whose numbers were estimated at from 1,000 to 1,200. After the meeting had been called to order the Committee appointed the evening previous made a report, detailing substantially the following facts: About six o'clock Sunday evening, the two girls mentioned in last evening's Times, passed the Court House. WILKINS was sitting on the steps. Knowing the children, he stopped them, and persuaded them to look at his office. Inside of the room, which was darkened by the shutters being closed, he endeavored, first by persuasion and by the offer of money, to carry out his outrageous intentions. As it was, he succeeded in committing gross indecencies before the girls succeeded in getting away from him.

The Committee also presented a sworn statement of Judge WILKINS, to the effect that nothing improper had occurred between him and the children.

After the reading of the report, a resolution was offered condemning Judge WILKINS for his conduct, and demanding, in the name of the people of Butler County, that he forthwith resign his office and leave the County. The resolution was adopted.

Another resolution was passed, sympathizing with the worthy family of the accused, whose hearts have been lacerated by this affair. The meeting then quietly adjourned.

Judge WILKINS left Hamilton on the Cincinnati train, at 7½ o'clock last evening, about an hour before the meeting assembled. He is probably on his way to the Great Salt Lake.

The citizens are in earnest in their action, and are determined to have their resolutions carried out to the letter.

The following are the resolutions adopted at the meeting, for a copy of which we are indebted to Mr. BRIVN, the accommodating telegraph operator at Hamilton:

Whereas, THOMAS H. WILKINS, Probate Judge of this county, who by virtue of his office, is the guardian of the orphan and the unprotected, as well as the Judge, whose duty it is to protect innocence and punish crime, stands in the unenviable position of being guilty of debauching both his Court-room, on last Sunday, P. M., two little girls of about the age of eleven years, and thus, in a place which should have been to him at least, of all others, most sacred to law and propriety, by language most foul, and conduct most detestable, insulted said girls, and outraged the feelings of our entire community; and

Whereas, our laws afford no adequate punishment for such an offence, therefore, be it

Resolved, That this meeting regards his conduct as a disgrace to the office, to the people of the county, and the community at large; and, we request him forthwith to resign said office and leave the County of Butler.

Presentation to Commander Ingraham by the German Citizens of Charleston.

The presentation of a sword, manufactured by the German citizens of Charleston, for Commander INGRAHAM, came off last Thursday evening, at the Military Hall, Charleston, according to expectation. It was intended to be rather a private affair, notwithstanding the public announcement, but the result, at least, was quite contrary. The Hall was filled some time before 7 o'clock, by the many citizens who were desirous of witnessing the interesting ceremony, and everything was conducted with open doors. The presentation was made without any ostentation. Capt. INGRAHAM entered the room accompanied by several gentlemen, met those appointed to await him, and received the sword from the hands of Mr. MELCHERS, editor of the Zeitung, who accompanied the presentation with an appropriate speech.

Commander INGRAHAM, upon receiving the weapon, briefly replied in the following words:

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN OF THE GERMAN ASSOCIATION: I cannot but feel highly gratified that the German portion of my fellow townsmen have deemed my conduct in the affair of the 4th July, at Smyrna, in rescuing MARTIN KOSTA from the Austrian authorities, of such a character as to induce them to present me with this beautiful weapon. I believed MARTIN KOSTA entitled to the protection he claimed at my hands, and I should have proved recreant to the trust reposed in me by the Government, had I not extended to him the aid he sought. It has been a source of great gratification to me, that I was so nobly sustained by the head of the Government, the chief of the department under whose immediate control I was, and the whole American people. It is not generally known that I waited upon the Governor of Smyrna and urged upon him in the strongest language I could use, the propriety of his demanding the immediate restoration of KOSTA to the soil of Turkey, from whence he had been so cruelly and unjustly forced. He admitted all I said, but as he had not the power to enforce his demand he could only report the case to Constantinople. I then determined that KOSTA should not be sent to Tripoli; and soon after made the demand which so happily ended in his release and safety without bloodshed. Mr. President, in accepting this good sword, allow me to return you my thanks for the very flattering manner you have been pleased to speak of my exertions upon the occasion for which I am thus honored. I shall always wear it with pride, as the work of artizans of the loved city which gave me birth, and where I hope to rest when I shall have fulfilled the time allotted me upon earth. To you, gentlemen, individually and collectively, I wish all the happiness and success you seek in the land of your adoption, and where all who conduct themselves as good citizens, are sure of being honored and protected.

A. J. BLESCHKE, Auctioneer.

54 BEAUTIFUL COTTAGE AND VILLA SITES ON YONKERS, AND ON THE BANK OF THE HUDSON RIVER, AT AUCTION.—ANTHONY J. BLESCHKE & CO. will sell at public auction, on TUESDAY, July 31, 1855, at 12 o'clock, at the Merchants' Exchange, New-York, the following desirable real estate, viz:

LARGE SALE OF YONKERS PROPERTY.—Fifty-four elegant cottage and villa sites, situated on Riverdale, Valentine and Franklin avenues, in or near the village of Yonkers, Westchester County, and State of New-York, the whole commanding a fine view of the Hudson River, &c. These plots of ground average from one half to two and a quarter acres.

A portion, or the best of the whole, of this beautiful property lies on the bank of the Hudson River, and in the immediate vicinity of the railroad station at that place; also, very near the steamboat landings, and in the midst of schools, academies, churches, stores, hotels, and splendid cottage residences.

It is also one of the most desirable pieces of property that has been offered to the public for many years. Its proximity to the City of New-York, being distant about 16 miles and only one-half hour's travel by railroad, makes it very desirable for merchants and others doing business in the City, who wish to avail themselves of an opportunity to purchase a fine cottage site. This property, and the picturesque scenery surrounding it, and the beautiful view of the noble Hudson, cannot be surpassed. The convenience of access from the City, together with the healthy location and excellent neighborhood, all combine to make this an exceedingly desirable property for a gentleman's country residence, or for those wishing to make profitable investments.

TERMS.—Ten per cent. on day of sale; 20 per cent. on Sept. August; the balance can remain on bond and mortgage, payable three years from day of sale, and an abstract of the title will be furnished to each purchaser, free of charge.

For lithographic maps and more full particulars, apply to the Auctioneers, No. 1 Broad-st., New-York.

SIRES OF A PRAYER.

John Robinson of Thirty-ninth-street, near Eighth-avenue, Patrick Kerrigan of No. 305 West Twenty-ninth street, James Clark of No. 300 Twenty-ninth-street, Michael Taggart of Thirty-third-street, John Kermin of No. 275 Eighth-avenue, Philip Sheehan of Forty-second-street, Henry Cunningham of Thirty-ninth-street, all own up to being drunk, but scorned to tell how they became so.

TAKING IT AS IT COMES.

James Moore and John Maloney, both live at No. 199 Thirty-ninth-street, were out together and drank whatever came in the way. Did not mean to get drunk, only wanted to have a good time, but slipped the noose too far and got caught.

GAVE HER THE FIRST LESSON.

Patrick Cohehan of No. 500 First-avenue, drank six glasses, and sent his child out for it.

A BRACE OF BUCKS.

James Riley and John Keegan roamed together at the corner Second-avenue and Thirty-first-street, went out on a "glorious spree," and were picked up by an officer in Thirty-third-street, after having had a general round of drinks.

Intoxication in Brooklyn.

Forty-six cases were made during the forty-eight hours previous to yesterday evening, of which twenty-one were for drunkenness. Of the latter, Justices Smith disposed of the following by fining them each $10: John Crawford, James Henry, Wm. McDonald, Patrick Kelly, Patrick Gillen, James Nolan, Margaret Alexander and Bridget Kelly.

The following were brought before Justice Cornwell: John Hawks, Dangblin Deely, Michael McNamara, Patrick Price and James Gillen.

None of the above parties appeared to know where they got their liquor. They were fined $10 each.

SEVENTY DRUNKARDS—THE LOWER QUARTER.

The case of Thomas Berry, charged with selling liquor contrary to the provisions of the Prohibitory Law, which was to be tried before Justice Jacobs yesterday, was postponed by mutual consent of both parties, until the Supreme Court give their decision in the liquor cases argued before that Court during the last term.

The case of Will an Guichard, charged with the same complaint as the above, and which was to be tried on Wednesday next, will be further postponed on the same grounds as the above.

The Rochester Liquor Case.

From the Daily Democrat.

LAGER BIER A MALT LIQUOR, AND THEREFORE PROHIBITED.—The tedious trial in the case of the Front-street lager bier seller, (RAN) came to a close on Friday night. The testimony was closed at 6 P. M., and at 7 the counsel commenced summing up, occupying two hours. Justice MOORE then charged the Jury with much perspicuity and general fairness, stating the law clearly, choosing to consider it constitutional, while it remains undecided, and briefly reviewing the testimony, which proved conclusively the sale of the liquor, and the evidence of its being composed in part of malt, and containing alcoholic properties. The Justice charged that if they found, from the evidence, that the liquor in question had intoxicating properties, or that it was a malt liquor, and had been sold by defendant contrary to law, they must find him guilty, under the act. They were to dismiss all questions as to the policy or impolicy of the law itself, and judge only as to its infraction—juries in Justices' Courts being, to a limited extent, judges of the terms of the law itself.

The Jury took the case at about 10 o'clock, and returned at 10½ with a verdict of "guilty."

NEW-YORK CITY.

Not So.

Mr. BARNUM is out of town somewhere—off in New-England, we think, trying to counteract by his lectures the evil that the Commencement orators are doing at all the Colleges, by using his name invariably as the synonym of humbug. The country press insists that he is off scouring the country for new marvels, as the German Jews go out to Europe and drag the Continent for fresh singing-women for the Academy. Some of them definitely assert and stake their Sunday hats on the truth of the assertion, that he is negotiating for the services in his Museum of the snake-charmed girl of Gilmanton.

We love to probe these reports to their bottom, as we abominate printing a word that one might not take oath of as head and head with the solemn truth.

So, yesterday, we sent our blandest reporter to the Museum to institute a thorough investigation of the report. The Albino's eyes flashed sparks, when she was asked. "No," said she, "Mr. BARNUM would scorn to deal with monsters—his sensitive mind would shrink back from the thought of bringing the snake-girl to New-York." The Bearded *Lady, when asked if the rumor could be true, al*most fainted—ejaculating as she swooned—"It would be too disgusting." The impression is in the Museum that Mr. BARNUM would deem the thing too immoral for his Museum, and too coarse to be thought of. And inasmuch as the officers of that Institution think it would prove a bad speculation since the arrest of the charmed girl's father, and the proof that the little girl has been bitten, we incline to the opinion that the report of an engagement was premature. Those who are very curious to see the exhibition would best go on to Boston. The Stonington route is the pleasantest, but by taking the New-Haven route one could get a chance to see the great curiosity a night earlier.

Nor is it true, so far as we can learn, that BARNUM has engaged the three racing Amazons of Seneca County, Ohio, to run against time and decency from the Hippodrome to the Bowling Green, and sit as candidates for places in the Portrait Gallery of Beauty before cooling off after the exercise.

The Workingmen.

The last meeting of the workingmen previous to their mass-meeting in the Park, was held last evening at No. 1 Avenue A. G. W. JAQUES occupied the Chair, and P. DONALDSON acted as Secretary. Nearly all the Wards were fully represented, and after the transaction of some business of a miscellaneous nature, the Chairman stated that the following gentlemen had been invited to address the mass-meeting on Wednesday, (to-morrow,) viz.: Gen. Ward, Hon. Mike Walsh, Hon. Gilbert C. Dean, Capt. Rynders, Theodore E. Tomlinson, Councilman Clancey, ex-Alderman Kelly, Hon. Nicholas Seagriet, H. W. Genett, Esq., John G. Doane, Esq., Hon. Daniel B. Taylor, Wm. B. Wardsworth, Esq., Hon. Judge Meech, Hon. A. C. Morton and Chauncey W. Shaffer.

Mr. HALL observed that although the speakers were numerous, and represented various parties, yet it was to be distinctly understood that this was no fusion of party, nor was it a party movement in any shape. It was simply a meeting of workingmen looking for their rights and trying to fight the rich man in order to procure bread for their families.

The next business was the election of a Treasurer, which resulted in the appointment of Mr. LOZIER.

After the above appointment the meeting was occupied chiefly in collecting funds for the expenses attendant on the contemplated meeting, and a very large sum was collected.

A meeting of the Committee of Arrangements will take place at 8 o'clock this morning, at ABELL's in Broadway.

Interesting Casualty—Indeed a Very Interesting Case.

During the heaviest of the shower yesterday afternoon, as JOB SMITH, No. 589 Ann-street, dealer in old iron and plated ware, and SAMUEL JONES, of No. 555 Anthony-street, ship chandler, were riding up Broadway to take tea at Hon. GEO. BANCROFT's, (now gone to Newport, not to Rome, as was reported,) a middle-aged gentleman on the sidewalk had his umbrella turned. It did not create any great excitement, nor did it hurt anybody, but it occurred to Mr. SMITH, who makes the best bargains in old plated ware of anybody in these parts, and also to Mr. JONES, who pays higher for rags and old rigging than any man in the Sixth Ward, that if they would call at the DAILY TIMES Office and state the case in the right shape, it might answer as well as an advertisement, and the editor would be thankful beside. They pleaded that the Evening Post did a similar job for two distinguished literary gentlemen the other day, who, on their visit to Mr. IRVING, saw or heard tell of a man's being struck with lightning. The argument was satisfactory, and we publish the interesting casualty.

Embarrassing Situation of a Public Speaker.

At a late celebration connected with Common School affairs, one of the distinguished gentlemen who superintended the meeting was observed by his friends to be unusually stiff in his manner, and to appearances greatly embarrassed in the delivery of his speech. At the time, our indefatigable reporter was unable to account for it. But to the truly enterprising all first causes, like murder, will "out" after a while.

It happened thus: The evening was exceedingly hot, and the saloon was excessively small for the company that crowded into it. It was so hot that even the devoutest readers of the Churchman plied their fans, though indeed, it was a secular occasion and they need not have consulted their consciences at all. The distinguished Doctor of whom we speak, was no less affected by the heat than were the audience. But unlike them he had a duty to perform. He wore thin white pants that were whiter than snow, and thinner than pants should be on a hot night. He had been announced, had wiped the perspiration from his excited brow, and was in the act of rising, when a sudden rent that spanned just half the circle of his pants where their breadth was most imposing, shocked the orator. It was too late to retire,—indeed retiring, unless most skilfully managed, were infinitely worse than facing the audience. So he went on, and if never before, he did that night what BACON says a great man doeth,—he "looked before and behind with most tremulous care." The Doctor's friends will readily forgive his lack of suavity and ease upon that occasion, when they have read the reason for it.

To Get Across Town.

It is a great shame that after this date onward, until there is a great reform, in a City of New-York's pretensions, a lady cannot ride from the longitude of Second-avenue to that of Fifth-avenue without paying the expenses of a carriage hired for the purpose. Hitherto, by means of a system of commutation, of which the particulars were kept as far from the public understanding as possible, travel across town, by means of the Second-street and a few other lines, has been feasible for the initiated. Henceforth that privilege is denied us, and if they who are West-siders wish—and what business have they indeed to deal at all together? Is not the west side the residence of fashion, and the east of Germans and mechanics?—but if they do wish to deal at all with the East side people, they must walk it, or take different stages, pay double fare, and get within a dozen blocks, if they can, thus, of their destination. It strikes us it would be well not to stand it much longer. Either let us have our commutation system again extended and on a better basis, or let us have two or three across-town lines established. Even between America and Africa a line of steamers has been talked of as desirable. Why not equally necessary a line of stages from the east to the western shores of our City? The difference in the people is certainly no greater.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

"NOTICE.—On and after Wednesday, 1st day of August next, no transfer tickets will be given or taken on this line." Signed by the proprietors.

"'Tis well known that the transfer system about to be abolished, was agreed to by these same parties in consideration of the withdrawal of a line of stages put on a few years since by Mr. BENTINE, who was enjoined and thereby prevented from competing with those whose influence compelled him to withdraw upon a promise of the several proprietors to transfer all passengers over their lines in crossing the City above Grand-street at sixpence each. The same has, I believe, been kept up uninterruptedly until the present time, and the public have been accommodated, (myself and family among the number,) and I feel it is somewhat of a breach of confidence in said parties in now abolishing the system. I am persuaded that there has not been much loss to the proprietors, for they certainly succeeded in driving off a powerful opposition, which movement has been the primary means of establishing the transfer system. The public convenience requires a cheap mode of conveyance across town. I believe a line through Bleecker-street from river to river, and another through Canal-street, (when it shall be completed,) also from river to river, at three cents fare, would pay as well as many of the long routes at sixpence. If I am correctly informed, all the proprietors except CURTIS & Co. are willing to continue the system, and I am informed Messrs. CURTIS & Co.'s reason for withdrawal is based upon the small balance of trade against him in their settlement. If their act shall put one or more lines across town at half the cost to the public using such convenience, it appears to me that a larger balance of trade against such parties will be the result, unless it shall draw an unwilling promise again to accommodate the public for another indefinite period. Many of the old routes during the past eighteen months reduced their fare to three and four cents, which drove the mass of stage proprietors to a consolidation in order to keep the price up. The public, when once aroused to a sense of right, are more powerful than all consolidations compacted together for selfish ends. ONE IN FAVOR OF THE TRANSFER.

Gleanings from the Mayor's Office.

A STREET BLOCKADED.

Complaint is made that Bethune-street is entirely blocked up and rendered impassable between Washington and West-streets, by the piles of lumber built up on both sides.

A DISORDERLY HOUSE.

It is alleged that the houses, Nos. 6 and 8 Varick-street, are kept in a very disorderly manner, to the great disturbance of the peaceful slumbers of the neighborhood.

DELIGHTFUL RESIDENCES ON THE BANKS OF THE HUDSON.—There is not a more beautiful place for a residence within hailing distance of this City, we believe, than in the thriving village of Yonkers. It is accessible several times a day by railroad and steamboat. To those who contemplate purchasing a home in the country, we would call their attention to the advertisement of Mr. ANTHONY J. BLEECKER, in another column. He announces that he will sell at auction to-morrow, at the Merchants' Exchange, fifty-four cottage and villa sites on Riverdale, Valentine and Franklin avenues, in the village of Yonkers. These lots are in size, from a half to two and a quarter acres each. A large portion of the property is situated on the banks of the Hudson River, and affordsjan extensive view of the surrounding country. The location is said to be healthy, and the neighborhood is excellent.

SHOCKING ACCIDENT—A LITTLE GIRL SERIOUSLY WOUNDED.—The public being informed through the medium of our valuable sheet that CHAS. H. RING was agent for the celebrated Balm of Thousand Flowers, (the only article that beautifies the complexion and removes all tan, pimples, and freckles from the face,) a tremendous crowd gathered around his store yesterday morning, for the purpose of purchasing the article. In the rush a little girl was pushed over and severely injured. N. B.—We have just been informed that the child is out of danger. The proprietors have generously sent her anxious parents one whole gross of Balm. Ye Cologne-bottle was not on hand in time to prevent the accident.

GAS FIXTURES FOR THE AUTUMN TRADE.—We are manufacturing some new styles of Chandeliers, Brackets, Pendants, &c., in gilt, and in French and artistic bronze, which purchasers are invited to examine. CURTIS & RAY, No. 13 Canal-street, between Broadway and Centre-street.

Launch of the Defender—Speech of Hon. Edward Everett.

From the Boston Courier, July 30.

The launch of the new packet-ship Defender, from the yard of Mr. DONALD MCKAY, was the principal town event of Saturday morning. The ship is owned by Messrs. D. S. KENDALL and C. H. P. PLYMPTON. She is of most graceful model, registers 1,400 tons, her length is 200 feet, depth of hold 24 feet, breadth 36 feet 6 inches, and a finely carved statue of DANIEL WEBSTER ornaments her bow. The launch, which took place at 10½ o'clock, was witnessed by a large concourse of ladies and gentlemen. Among the persons of distinction present, we recognized Hon. EDWARD EVERETT, Hon. BENJAMIN SEAVER, FLETCHER WEBSTER, Esq., and Hon. JOHN P. BIGELOW. After the launch a large party met at the house of Capt. MCKAY, on White-street, and partook of a collation.

This over, Capt. MCKAY, in a few felicitous remarks, introduced Hon. Mr. EVERETT, who said that the occasion was one on which a formal speech would be out of place. His friend, Mr. KENDALL, one of the owners, in writing to him to attend the launch, had not said a word about a speech. An orator would seem almost like a land lobber here, and if he came with his tropes and figures, he would be thought to be playing a superfluous and foolish part. We look to you, Mr. MCKAY, he said, for the entertainment on this occasion. We came to listen to the music of your mallet as it knocked away the last block which held the beautiful vessel to the shore, and sent her to her destined element. Mr. EVERETT then expressed his gratification at the successful launch, and alluded briefly to the name of the ship, and the statute of the beloved WEBSTER which adorned her prow, which he said seemed to be looking down upon the waters and commending them, as he who it represented commanded the hearts of his fellow men when living. Giving the noble ship the name she bears was, he said, a just tribute to his long, faithful, might he not say, ill-requited services. He did defend the Constitution, not merely as every good citizen defends the government to which he owes allegiance, but because he saw in it the guaranty of inestimable blessings; because he felt that it is a kind of earthly Providence, surrounding us while we wake and while we sleep, and securing to us an amount of blessing such as have been enjoyed by no other people since the Creation. Another reason why Mr. WEBSTER prized the Constitution was that it spread its protecting ægis over the commerce of the country. He knew, as we all know, that commerce is the civilizer of nations, the parent of liberty, refinement, and the arts. He knew how the Constitution had lifted our commerce up from the miserable position which it occupied before that instrument was framed and adopted—how it had bound the different sections of the country together, harmonizing their varied interests, and bringing about that mutually beneficial intercourse which we now enjoy. But he was going too far, and would not detain the company further. Soon, he said, this noble ship will spread her canvas to the breeze, and as her captain, as he stands upon her deck and looks towards his home, receding from his sight, he will be accompanied by the best wishes of numerous friends. He may be sure that he can enter no port, however distant, where the name and fame of the DEFENDER OF THE CONSTITUTION have not preceded him: he can enter no port, however distant, where the flag of the Union which he bears will not be a sufficient protection, and let me add that he can enter no port where a ship built by DONALD MCKAY will not stand A No. 1, and if there were a letter before A, and a higher figure than 1, she would be entitled to it. In conclusion, Mr. EVERETT alluded very happily to the secret of Mr. MCKAY's success. He said he had been at a loss to comprehend it. Eighty-two ships he has built, all of the same fine class as we have seen launched to-day. Since he had been under this roof, he had learned the secret of that success. He saw it in good family government—in a good helpmeet. And who would say that much of that success is not to be credited to the sure counsels and cheering words of our accomplished hostess. He also congratulated Mr. MCKAY, Sen., on the honor and fame of his son—alluding to the patriarch as the father of fourteen children, and as having fifty grand-children, nine of whom were born last year. In closing his happy remarks, of which we have given an imperfect outline, Mr. EVERETT proposed:

The Health of Donald McKay.—A successful voyage to the noble ship, and all prosperity to Messrs. KENDALL & PLYMPTON, her enterprising owners.

Appropriate and interesting remarks were after*wards made by ex-Mayor SEAVER and Col. TRAIN.*

We understand that contributions are being made by inventors and other friends of Hon. CHAS. MASON, *late Commissioner of Patents, for a testi*monial to be presented to him, in token of their appreciation of his services in that office. S. T. MONDAY, July 30—P. M.

The Official Bank Averages (at Saturday, July 28,—advertised on another pages of our paper,—show the following actual changes in the various departments from the previous weekly returns:

Increase of Loans	$54,552
Increase of Specie	1,077
Increase of Circulation	2,412
Decrease in Deposits	488,802

These figures indicate remarkable steadiness in the movements of the City Banks. The position which they now occupy is, on the whole, a safe one, and if they can only maintain and protect themselves therein, they must continue to prosper. The alarm that certain parties are endeavoring to create about the magnitude of the Bank loans, on the strength of what they style "so light a specie reserve," is unwarranted. When the disproportion in these two items was relatively greater, and the condition of the Money market was not, in any sense, so easy and encouraging,—the Banks were generally regarded as being in tolerably independent and comfortable circumstances. Nor did the panic-makers of the time being, oppose this view, or denounce it, as a false one. An opinion, then so widely entertained, must have had something of a just basis; and what was true at that period is equally true at present. The banks are doing a legitimate business on legitimate principles; and persistance in such a course is fraught with success. They are not abetting speculators, *as has been charged. Speculation—as usually de*fined—does not now exist in financial or commercial circles. Current operations are marked by an extreme degree of caution and reserve. No one manifests the genuine speculative spirit, and as this is not apparent, it is improbable that the banks are aiming to develop and nurture it.

Including the Sub-Treasury balance on Saturday afternoon, the following is the general

The Stock Market to-day was pretty lively and steady. State Securities were more sought after. Missouri Sixes found free buyers at each meeting of the Board, opening at 95 and closing at 95½, b3. $20,000 Louisiana Sixes were sold during the afternoon session at 95. Virginia Sixes were in further request at rather firmer rates. The activity in Railroad Bonds was, in a measure, restricted to Illinois Central, which reached 87, and Erie Convertibles of '71, which left off at 87½, b20. Of Railway Shares the most inquired for were Reading, which opened at 89½, s60, and closed at 90, and Erie, which were steady. New-York Central, ex-dividend, were rather quiet, but firm, the latest Board quotation being 98, s60. DUNCAN, SHERMAN & Co. will pay on the 20th of August the dividend of 4 ⅌ cent. on the Stock of this Company, registered in New-York.
